↑ me too!

Hey Lori, I'm so glad I finally got a class with you this year! Thanks to Ann, I know what a nice, fun, sweet person you are - and your parties ain't bad, either! I'll never forget what you were like at Ann's B-Day party! The pictures were so funny! We'll have to plan one at my house (so we can sneak out at night and spy on all the neighborhood guys - oh! Hi, Mom!). Anyway, thanks for being my friend. Have a great summer, but don't get too much tanner than me, or I may get very jealous! See ya' over the summer! Love, Sue

Lori,

This past year has been great! I'll always remember all the fun we had in our sophomore year. I can hardly wait till next year when we'll be seniors!

your house. I do hope you didn't have your B-day with us. We should go out. If you need anything next year you were pretty funny.

Thanks for the party at getting to be a ritual. I gain weight over our locker! (Hee, Hee) Maybe for doughnuts again. one to help with concessions know who to ask! That I knew you would win the election and I'm so glad you did! Just don't let it go to your head! (Just kidding!) You've been a great friend to me in all of my times of trouble which is nearly all the time. (Like with K., D., J., etc...) I hope we can have some really good times this summer.

I'm glad you + Jeff are back together again because you two just go together. I was beginning to think you never would, but I underestimated Jeff a lot. Don't let that problem with Danny get you down.

I guess he's just not your type, and you deserve to be treated really special! (Let Jeff read that!) I know things will turn out great for you at the end of exams, you're too smart not to get A's. In closing I'd just like to say that you've always been, and still are one of my best, closest, + sweetest friends! Don't ever change your personality. Don't let the men in your life, live for you. Make your own decisions and don't rush life. You've got a lot of happy years ahead. God bless!

BRUCE - FOREVER

Lake Braddock has never been afraid to be different. Initiated as an experiment in the benefits of open classrooms and college-sized enrollment, Lake Braddock was quick to recognize the needs of its students, as well as the changing times. As the years went by, new rules were created to meet the growing problems of a community of 5000, while walls and partitions crept into the school's trademarks, open subschools and departments. But with these changes came the students of the 80's, proud of their school with its unique style of education and proud of the accomplishments which set it above neighboring schools. Students could take pride in the growing achievements of its special departments with award winning musical groups and outstanding artists, athletes, mechanics, actors and mathematicians.

Future Bruins enjoy the sights and sounds of the Fall Festival.

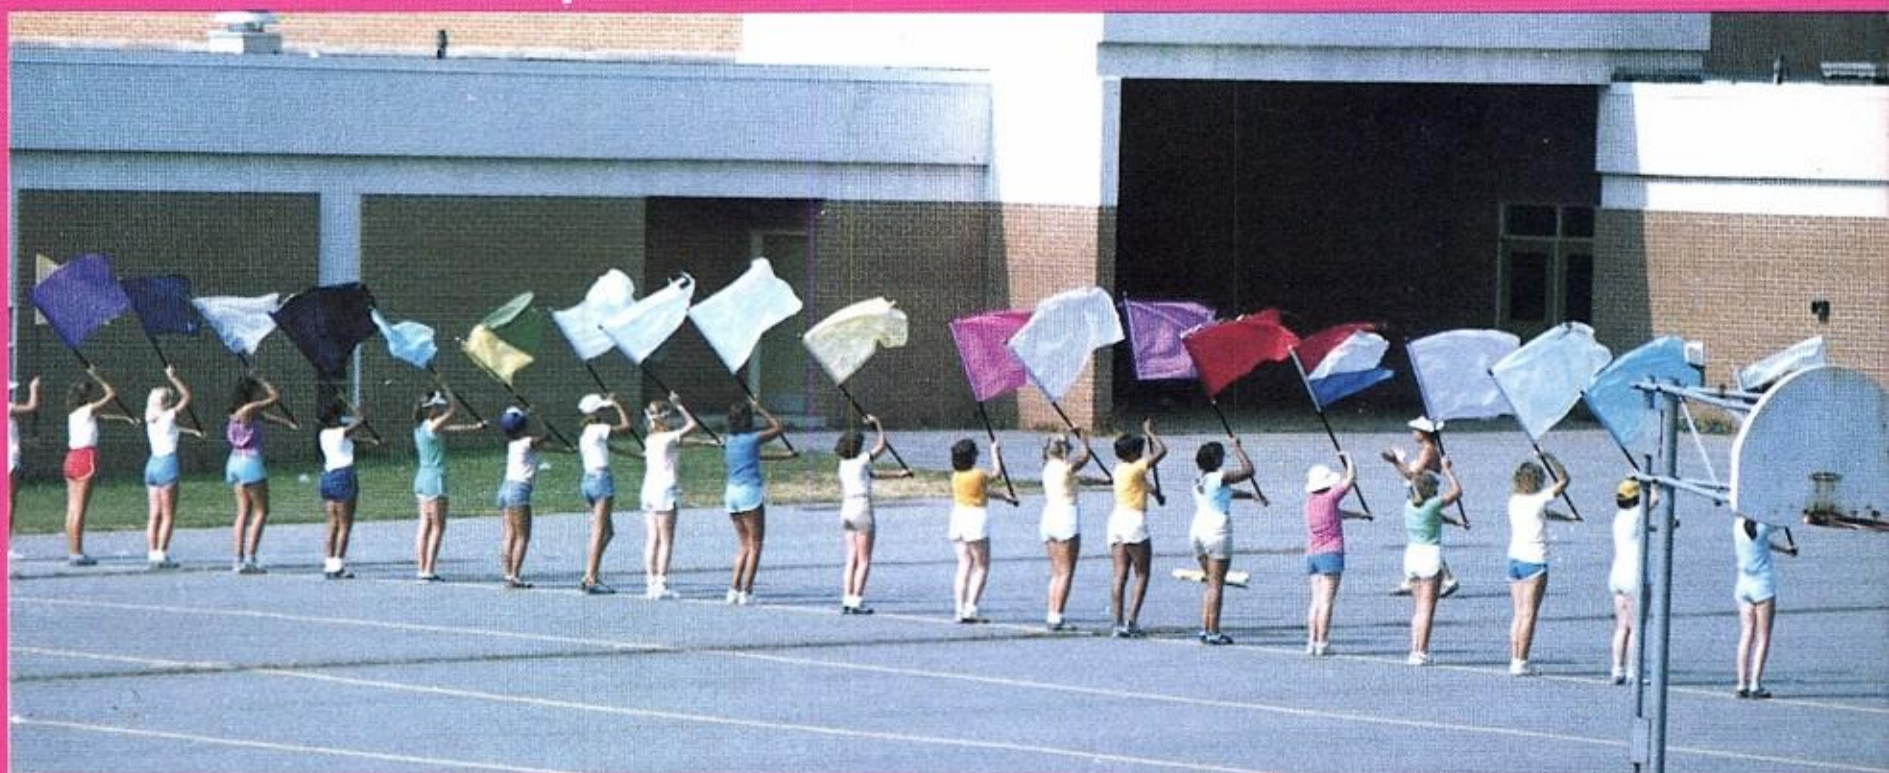

Students could also look at their school and see the reflection of a changing world. Computers, the most recognizable symbol of the future, monitored school enrollment, student absences, scheduling, and class ranking, as well as helped counselors to aid students in college decision-making with the Guidance Information System. A word processing system, the first of its kind in Fairfax County, modernized our journalism department, making the school's yearbook and newspaper the first to be completely student produced in Virginia. Reflections of our modern world were also apparent in our everyday life. Home video and pocket computer games became commonplace, and science fiction movies and books experienced a surge in popularity.

Enjoying the warmth of the bon fire, Chris Trizna and Caroline Williams take part in the activities of Homecoming Week.

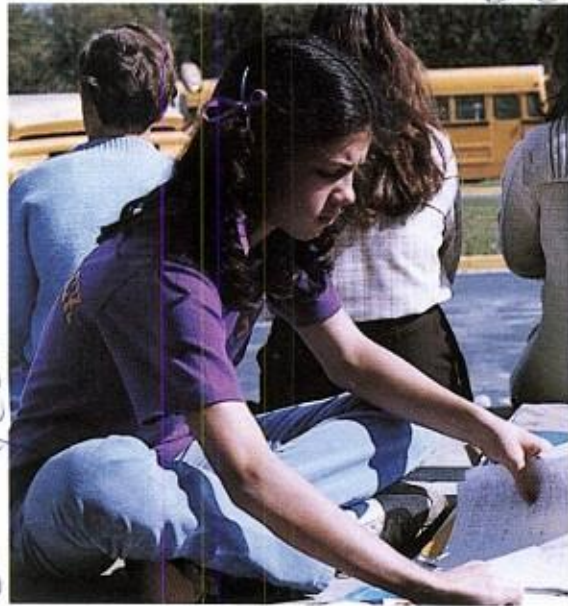

Also present this year were signs of a nation leaning towards the conservative methods of the past to deal with the new demands of the future. Discipline was a major focus, most evident to students in administrative patrols outside the school and in the hallways to arrest a growing student attendance problem. The separation of the intermediate lunch and break periods from that of the 9-12 grades symbolized a move towards the traditional high school image and away from the experimentation of the 70's. But Lake Braddock continued growing and changing and remained, as it had been from its opening day, "Ahead of the Race".

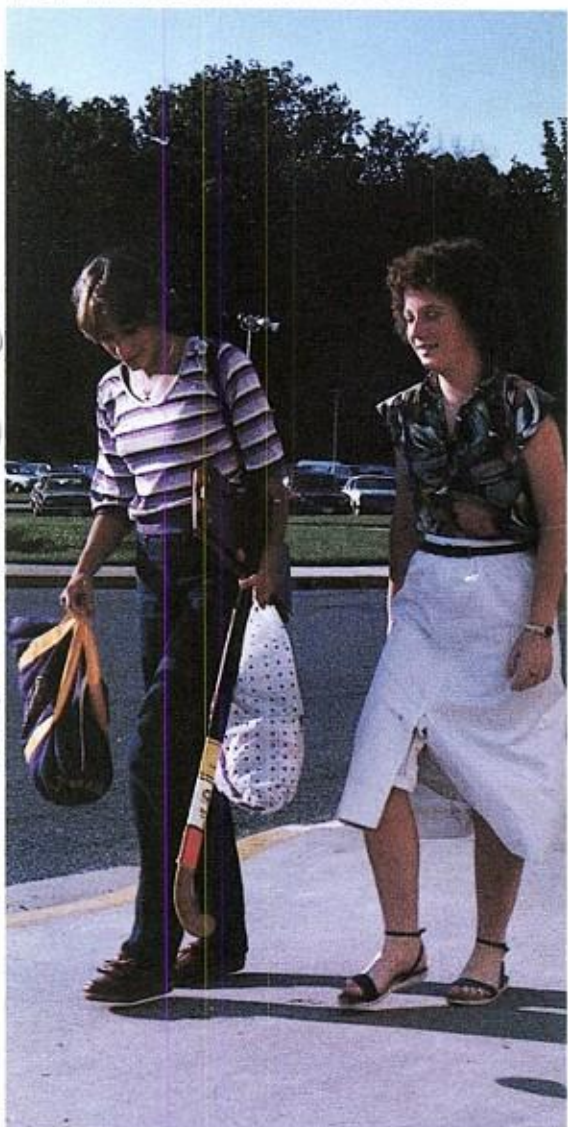

Lori, well this book has no more good pages, everybody hogged them up! (Just kidding) Softball was the best— I'm really glad I got the chance to know someone a special & pretty as you! (And that's the truth!) I'll always remember when we used to tease Jill, Kim & Lisa's throwing! (See I can spell!) Jill she make us ill... Kim and her am's... and then... your a great softball player (no lie) Lisa & her beautiful throwing! But you know we don't want to play for butches team Ha! Ha! Stay out of trouble but party it up! Well have a great summer & and an excellent "Junior" year!

IN ORBIT

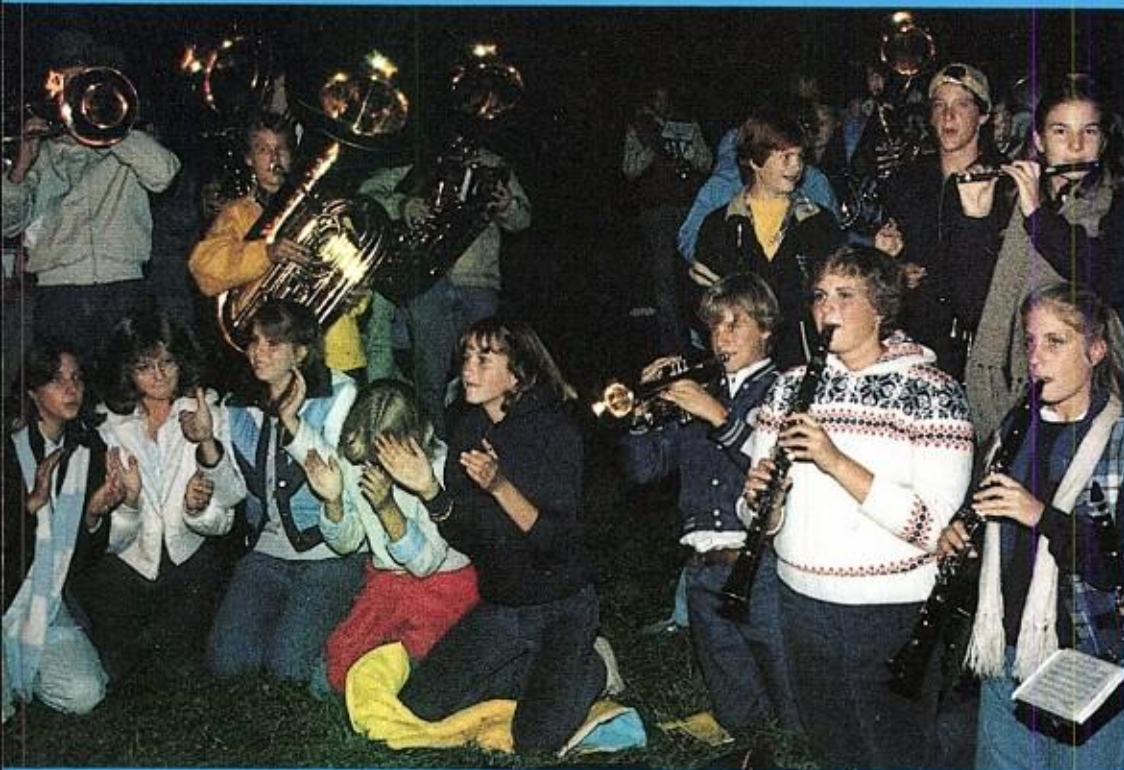

For spirited students, the Homecoming bonfire is an enjoyable way to spend a Thursday night. (Lisa Hastey, Sara Trexler, Bonnie Pierce, Teri Ashwell, and Lorene Ward)

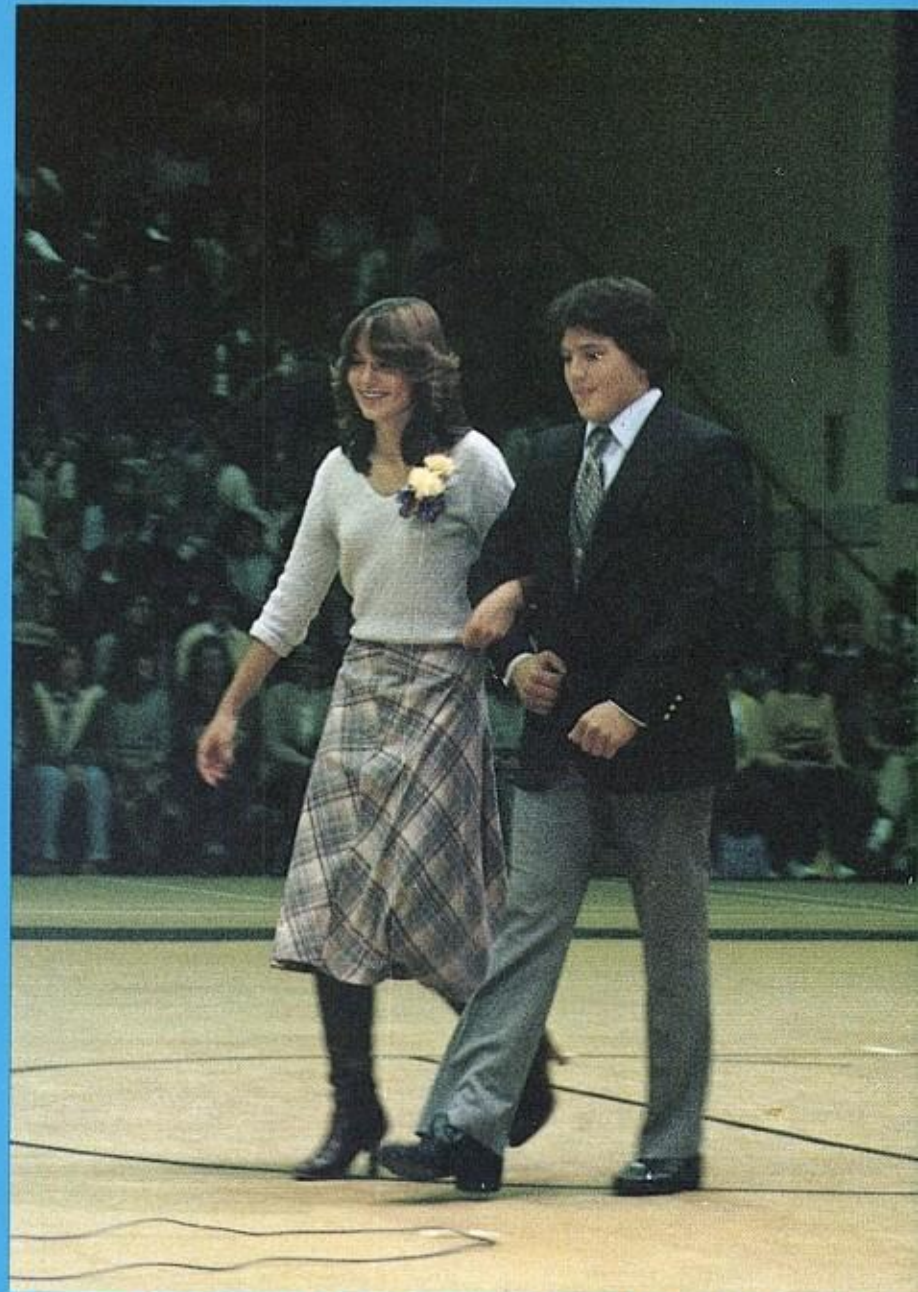

At the summer's end, classes and social activities were put in orbit. Most students were involved with many activities, both in and out of school. With the help of modern technology we found our spare time more enjoyable. Many occupied their time with the use of electronic games. Good times were shared with friends, and teachers participated in extra curricular activities, along with the students. We advanced through another year of progress in our school, community, and in our country.

A WEEK IN BRUIN HISTORY

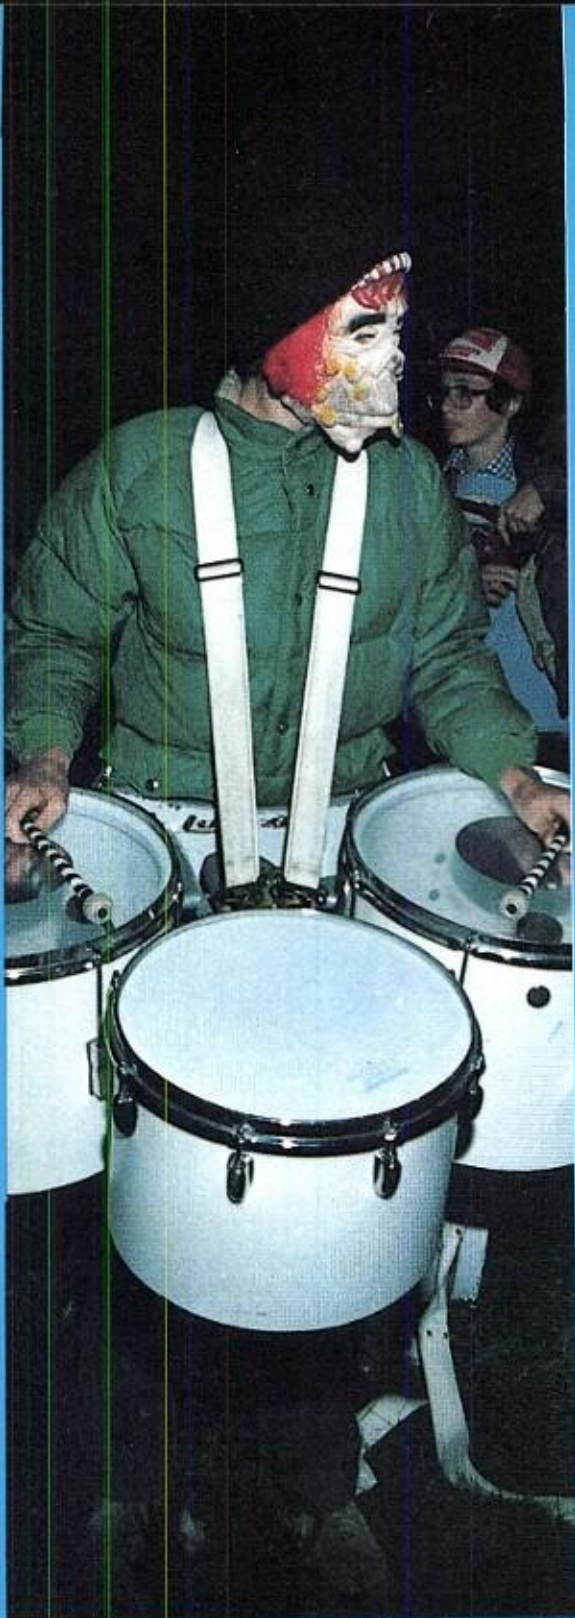

The marching band is very enthusiastic and set a perfect example of Bruin spirit at the bonfire.

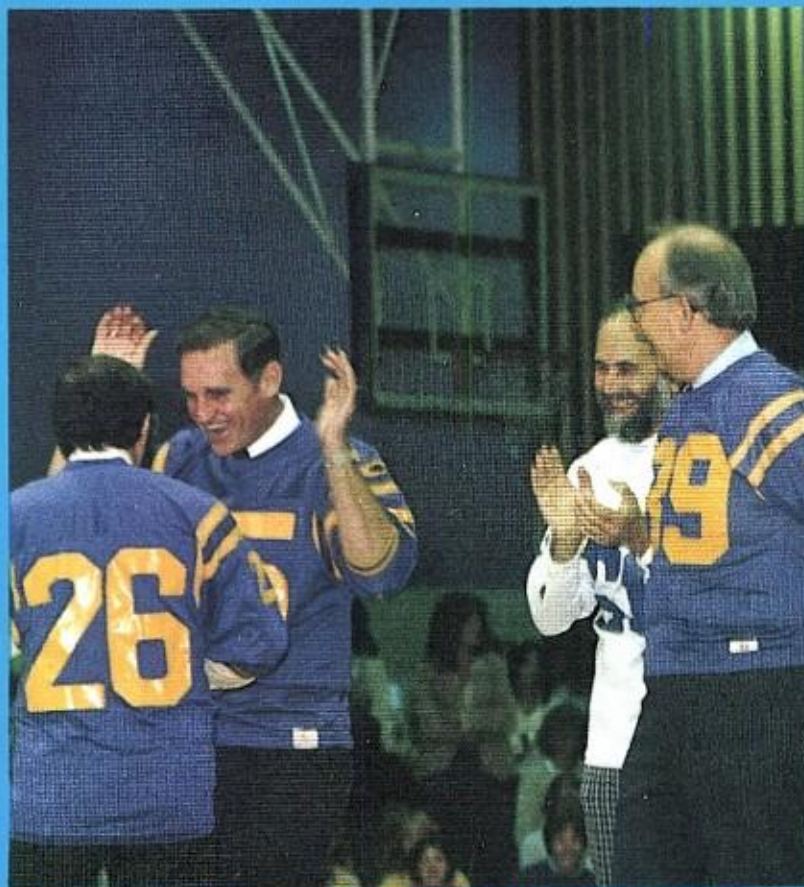

During the pep rally, Joe Angulo escorts Jenny McGuire through the gymnasium as the homecoming court is presented.

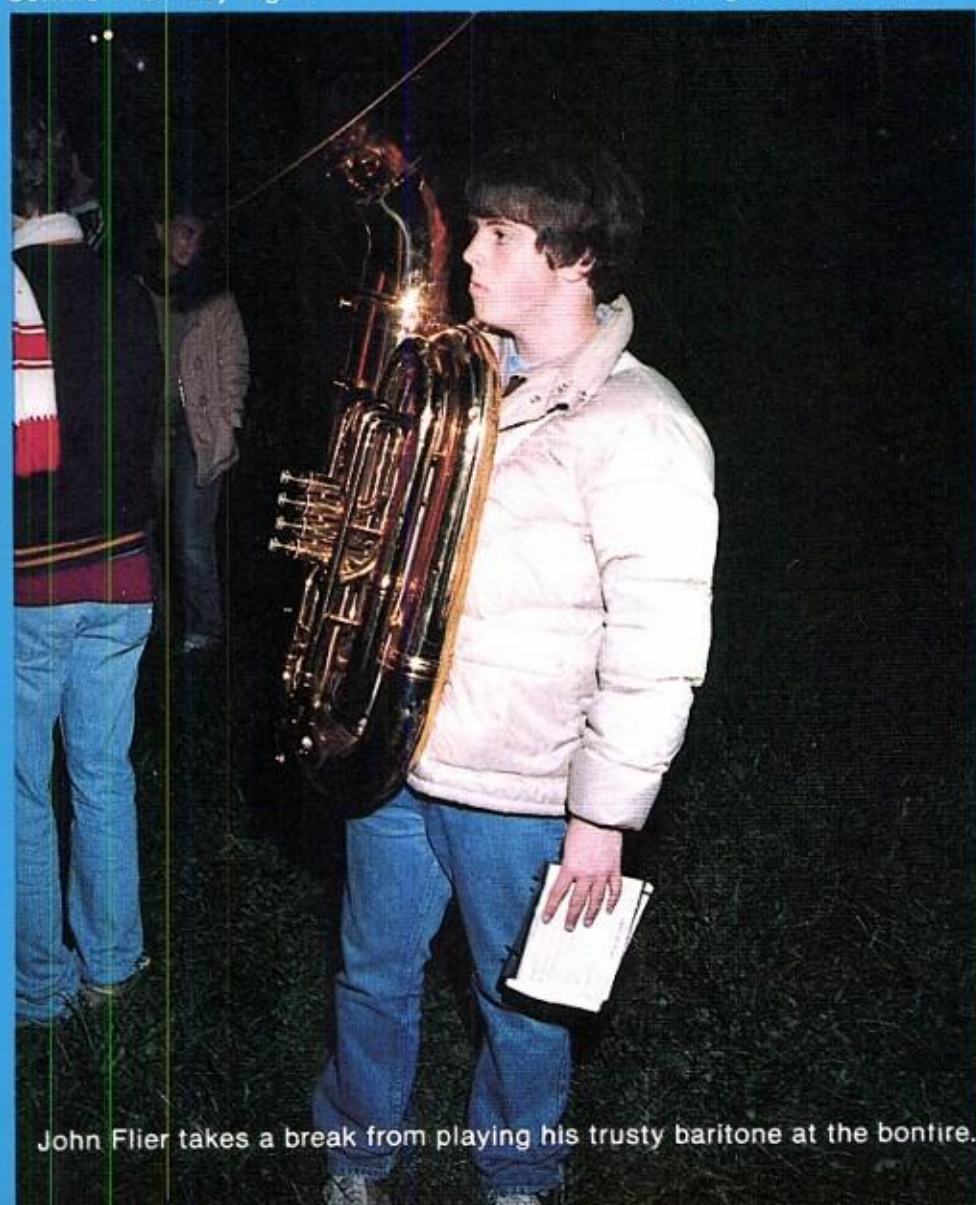

On Thursday night, the bonfire was a great way to get warm and build up spirit for the game Friday.

John Flier takes a break from playing his trusty baritone at the bonfire.

During Homecoming week, school spirit gleamed throughout the school. On Tuesday night, Fall Follies' skits were presented to the student body with the theme of Bruins in American History. First place went to the SGA, but afterwards they forfeited it to the girls' track team, since the SGA had sponsored Fall Follies. Second place was awarded to the Class of '87, while the Class of '86 and the Keyettes tied for third. On Wednesday, in the cafeteria, intermediates indulged themselves on chocolate chip ice cream from Baskin Robins at the ice cream social. At the Bonfire on Thursday, Chantilly Charger dummies were tossed into the fire. It was clearly evident that the week's activities had been one of the best in Bruin History.

The culmination of an exciting, fun-filled Homecoming Week was the Homecoming Dance. Its theme was "Great American Lovers" which was a take-off on the float's theme, "Bruins in American History." Providing the music for the dance was "Joint Venture." Placing first in the float competition were the intermediates with their version of Mt. Rushmore. Second place was won by the class of '84 sporting a covered wagon. The Seniors captured third place with the "Spirit of '82". The Homecoming Court took its ride around the track at halftime. After the completion of the ride, it was announced that Cindy Ackerman had been chosen Homecoming Queen. Then, on to the second half of the football game where the Bruins finally scored. Chantilly had scored in the first half and the Bruins tried hard to catch up. The team played tough and made it a close game. The final score was Lake Braddock 8, Chantilly 14.

Adding to the fall colors, a Bruin Bear distributes balloons.

While most people were jumping into piles of leaves on a typical autumn Saturday afternoon, Bruins were falling into fun. The annual Fall Festival was held on Saturday, October 10. It was a typical fall day: sunny and nippy with a slight breeze that lifted everyone's spirits. Booths of all kinds were set up to sell puppets, pumpkins, wood crafts, dolls, ceramics, jewelry, coins, balloons, and beer cans for collectors. Food stands sold drinks, cotton candy, hot dogs, and the ever popular gummi bears. Games and other attractions included the moon bounce, ping-pong toss, coke toss, football toss, and the wheel-of-fortune. "I liked the Fall Festival because it seemed like everyone was having a good time and there was lots to do and see," commented senior Kim Garcia. We were entertained by "Dixie Suite," "Destony," and the Lake Braddock Swing Singers. Sue Michaelis felt, "The Swing Singers were the best I've ever seen them." Many graduates came back to view their old school and remarked how nice it was to be back. When it was all over, students fell into their cars and headed for home to prepare for the Homecoming Dance later that night.

David Phillips and his date find a quiet place to talk at the Back-To-School Dance.

On Friday night, about once a month, swarms of people would fill the cafeteria. While removing their coats and shoes, they'd laugh and joke casually. Attire was jeans and comfortable shirts that were easy to move around in. The students would then proceed to the dance floor and move their bodies to the beat of the music. What were these large gatherings? Religious ceremonies? Club initiation meetings? No, they were called Soc Hops. Dancing was usually the main event. An even amount of rock and disco was played by Soundtech, and often dances such as the "Pogo" could be found on the floor. But if your feet could never quite catch the beat, Soc Hops were a great place to meet friends and talk. As the evening would come to a close, people would begin to put their jackets back on and retrieve their shoes. Why couldn't these people just leave their shoes on? Well, traditions are traditions.

Excitement and anxiety were everywhere on September 8, the first day of school. Students piled off buses and into the once empty and quiet school. New faces, as well as old, appeared in the hallways. Friends that had not been seen since June shared their vacation experiences and hopes for the new year. Greetings continued to be exchanged as the bell rang and students went to their homeroom class. For the seventh graders, the transition from elementary to junior high gave them an awesome feeling coming from a small school to one so big with so many people. As for returning students, they found a different schedule of classes and new classmates a welcomed experience. All in all, the first day of school was a lively one for every student.

If spending all day after school and weekends was anyone's idea of fun, he or she was not likely to be considered to be a part of the mass majority. Though homework did take up a large chunk of spare time, usually students could squeeze in something more enjoyable. Most found a large variety of activities to choose from. These included the wide variety of sports, clubs, and organizations found at school, such as track, drama, and student government. If these possibilities were not sufficient, other hobbies could easily be found. There were the usual: listening to record favorites like the Rolling Stone's "TATTOO YOU," and Journey's "ESCAPE" or watching the "boob tube," and the out-of-the-ordinary, such as model airplane flying, skiing, and weightlifting. Different types of people enjoy different hobbies. These are just a few that will add to the memories of this school year.

Problems, problems, problems. That was a word that meant something to everyone. For the seniors, it was applications to college. Will I get accepted? Which one will I go to? These were just some of the worries of the senior class. PSAT's and SAT's came up for the juniors and brought troubles to those who were depending on a good score to get into the college of their choice. The main concern of the sophomores was obtaining their driver's license. Driving was a new and exciting experience, but also brought with it the agonies of gas money and borrowing the car from wary parents. Dating was a new experience for many freshmen. Also working to get good grades was another concern of the freshmen. These were the grades that really counted on their record. The eighth graders worried about getting prepared to enter high school. As for the seventh graders, they faced the problem of adjusting to a brand new school with 3500 older students and the trials and tribulations which accompanied it. Students had many anxieties throughout the year, but together they somehow found their own ways to cope with them and make things turn out all right.

Spirit, as defined by Webster's Dictionary, is enthusiasm, vivacity, loyalty: as in school spirit. Here at Lake Braddock, spirit was a way to bring all the students together. To help make everyone feel a part of things, students were asked to wear costumes to school on Halloween. The marching band gave a memorable performance in holiday costumes at the football game that evening. The S.G.A. sponsored a spirit week from January 11th to the 14th. The first day was Punk vs.

On Wednesday students were asked to dress-up as their favorite gangster. The 14th was a snow day and Friday was a holiday. Therefore, Sea-n-Ski Day was held on Monday the 18th. The fun of seeing friends dressed-up to display their school spirit brought us all together.

AFTER HOURS

Many students "hang out" around subschool media centers to exchange the latest news.

Whether "hanging out" at your locker or at the local shopping mall, most everyone had a place to go. Usually, most students could be found around restaurants such as Giffords, Mr. Gatti's, and other fast food places. Also, family amusement centers like Time Out were crowded with students ready to try their luck at challenging games like Space Invaders and Pac Man. On weekends the most popular new arrival was Uncle Sam's, a restaurant and bar. But for those who wanted more peaceful and quiet surroundings, parks and movie theaters were also favorites. Overall, students had a wide variety of places to go on weekends and after hours.

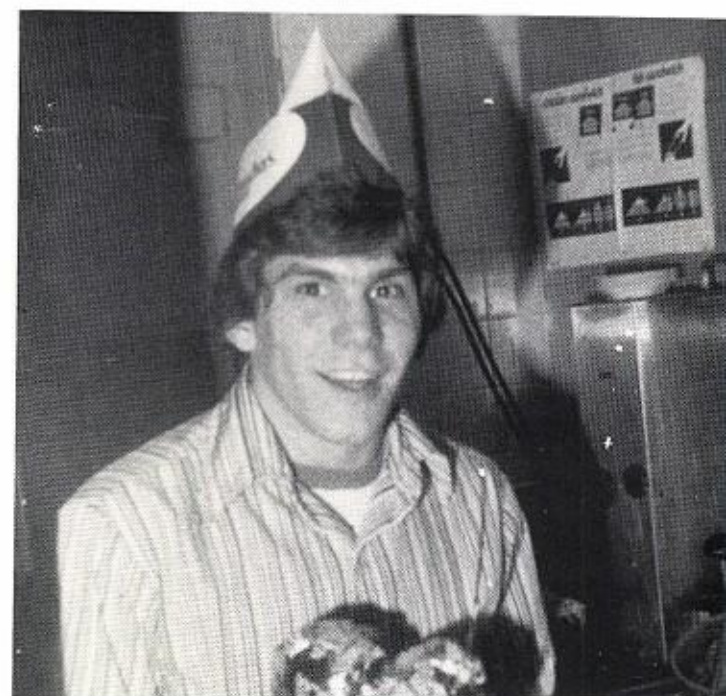

Keith Lattman avidly plays the most popular video game of the year, Pac Man, while Allen Fonseca advises his moves.

"Money makes the world go 'round". This sentiment was law as many Bruins joined the work force. After school and on weekends, students could be found earning money as cashiers, hosts or hostesses, banktellers, and sales clerks. Popular places to work were Roy Rogers, McDonalds, Pizza Hut, Fashion Factory, Woolco, Zayres, Ben Franklin, Drug Fair, and Peoples. Many students had unique jobs such as Teresa Boothe, Melinda Frostik, Cathy McGrail, and Karen Anderson who were models; Leslie Brown who taught dancing; and Sam Smith who worked in construction. Minimum wage was three dollars and thirty-five cents an hour, but worthy people collected more. Social Security and taxes seemed to take so much. Unfortunately, the wages didn't stay in wallets for long. Gifts for others, personal luxuries, food, and dates seemed to swallow the remaining earnings far too quickly. Budget conscious workers often managed to save for a car or college. All in all, the work was fun and proved to be an excellent experience.

With a happy smile and a light heart, people met the long awaited holidays full of the Christmas and Hanukkah spirit. Along with these holidays came the time for that hectic shopping. People fought their way through crowds to get the desired gift for each person on their list. Presents were exchanged with friends and greeting cards were sent off. This year we had the privilege of having Santa Claus (Jules Clifford) visit in the cafeteria on December 18 and 21. For a nominal fee, students were able to have their pictures taken with him and give him their Christmas wishes. The music department rehearsed and put on a number of Christmas shows, including "Twas The Show Before Christmas" put on by the Symphonic Chorale and "The Christmas Show" presented by the Women's Ensemble and the Intermediate Chorus. Keyettes sold Santa Grams, which were an excellent way to send special Christmas messages to friends. A holiday dinner was prepared for

What could possibly have been more fun than catching an egg thrown to you from twenty feet away, or passing an apple to another person with your mouth? The response from most people would be, "Many things!" However, these were just the kind of activities done at Class Night, on January 12. One event, the tug-of-war, was split into three categories: seventh vs. eighth grade; freshmen vs. sophomores; and juniors vs. seniors. Among other action packed events were the three legged race, balloon stomp, pie eating contest, spoon race, apple slobber, teacher egg toss, and pantyhose race. Contestants were scored in these events by six judges, including Mr. Trimm, the "Official Official." A rousing sense of class spirit was found at Class Night, even though the crowd wasn't quite as large as past years. The fifty cent "cover charge" went towards the SGA, so that other diverse activities could be held in the near future. At Class Night, there could only be one winner, but even so, the thrill of victory was tasted by everyone.

Happily Ever After

On July 29, Charles, Prince of Wales, married Lady Diana Spencer in St. Paul's Cathedral. This joyous occasion was shared by people worldwide, giving England the moral boost it has long needed through its economic and political difficulties. Crowds stood for hours along the streets of London hoping to get a glimpse of the royal couple parading in their horse drawn carriages. The crowds soon dispersed as the royal couple left for their honeymoon. Shortly thereafter news was heard about Princess Diana's pregnancy. The royal house anxiously awaited the little heir due in June 1982.

Let's Make A Deal

In mid-November, the U.S. Congress decided to promote the sale of A.W.A.C.'s to Saudi Arabia. Israel, concerned with her well being in the Middle East, was very much against the sale. The A.W.A.C.'s packet was scheduled to be delivered to Saudi Arabia in 1984, costing billions of dollars. The sale of more oil into the U.S. from Saudi Arabia was also part of the deal. Many felt that the A.W.A.C.'s deal was endangering Israel's well-being in the Middle East. Officials hoped the sale would better ties in the Mid-East between the United States and Saudi Arabia.

Sad Ending

On October the 6th, during the end of a military show in Egypt, a truckful of Egyptian conspirators jumped out of a truck and fired at the bandstand where President Sadat and staff were sitting. Bystanders ran for cover. Soon in the U.S., we learned that Sadat had been shot, but was not seriously wounded. Anxiously, we awaited more news concerning the situation. By noon, however we learned that President Sadat had been murdered by the conspirators. We were immediately concerned with the welfare of Egypt and sent ships into the Mediterranean and troops into Egypt. Hosni Murbarak took Anwar Sadat's place as Egyptian president. Although Murbarak was Sadat's aide and was recommended for the presidency, many felt that he could not take the place of Sadat, who had done so much for Egypt and the promotion of peace in the Middle East.

Watch Your Step

In early December, Poland's chief of staff, Jaruzelski, went on radio and television to tell the Polish people the nation was under martial law. As factories and mines were surrounded by striking workers, police used force to clear the resisting strikers away. Within hours, most of the union leaders had been arrested. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was flown to Warsaw. No further contact about Walesa was made for several days. All two way radios were taken over, transportation was limited, and contact with the outside world ended soon after martial law was declared. Anyone striking was to be gunned down or placed under arrest. But the Polish pride lived on as Poles continued to resist martial law and the Soviets.

Flight 90

On Wednesday, January 13, Air Florida Flight 90 crashed into the 14th street bridge, flattening four cars and a truck before plunging into the icy waters of the Potomac River. Rescue workers worked long into the night trying to retrieve the passengers of the Air Florida wreck, but only five out of the 76 people on the plane survived. Only three people whose car had been flattened by the plane survived. Rescue operations were hampered by rush hour traffic and some of the worst winter weather the Washington Metro had seen in many years. Investigations into the cause of the accident were begun with possible causes being ice on the wings and little visibility. Investigation procedures were sped up with the help of the voice recorder and flight data boxes. People such as Lenny Skutnik, who rescued one of the surviving passengers from drowning, fire, police, and rescue departments, and the hundreds of blood donors would be remembered for their eagerness to help their fellow man.

Up, Up, And Away

Forty seconds to go, then the space shuttle Columbia would take its second voyage into space. Suddenly, with a little more than thirty seconds before take off, the flight was delayed. The cause for delay was an oil clog in two auxiliary power units. Two days later, the flight was re-scheduled. Instead of the five day stay in space, the shuttle was brought down three days early. Many people gathered to watch the shuttle's re-entry. The crowd, tense with excitement, looked up at the sky where a faint speck was coming toward them. Yelling and jumping up and down, the crowd saw the shuttle make another perfect landing. That's two for Columbia.

EAT, DRINK & BE MERRY

Favorite Eating Places

1. McDonald's
2. Pizza Hut
3. Roy Roger's
4. Chesapeake Bay Seafood House
5. Pepperoni Stick

Ah, the pleasures of life! What could be a better way to spend time than to eat, drink, and be merry? Not much, according to most students this past school year. Dining out was a popular way to spend a Friday night, whether it was at an elegant restaurant, such as Barclay's, or a family style eatery, like Pizza Hut. Ice cream parlors, pizza places, and fast food restaurants were well liked, though some insisted that sitting at home eating popcorn tasted just as good. At lunch, many students went back to brown bagging it, bringing ham and cheese, chicken and good ol' peanut butter and jelly sandwiches to school. In the language department, classes often had "cultural experiences" with foods from the countries where their languages were spoken. But the time students probably ate the most was during holidays. A wide assortment of candy was munched on at Halloween, and turkey, potatoes, stuffing, and pies were "gobbled up" during Thanksgiving. It was hard deciding what to eat, but one thing was for sure: once one started to eat and drink, it was hard to stop.

Shawn Bevan enjoys the school cafeteria's food during "D" lunch.

The favorite eating place of Lake Braddock students, McDonalds, is located on Rolling Road.

Mr. Gatti's is one of Lake Braddock's favorite pizza places, second only to Pizza Hut.

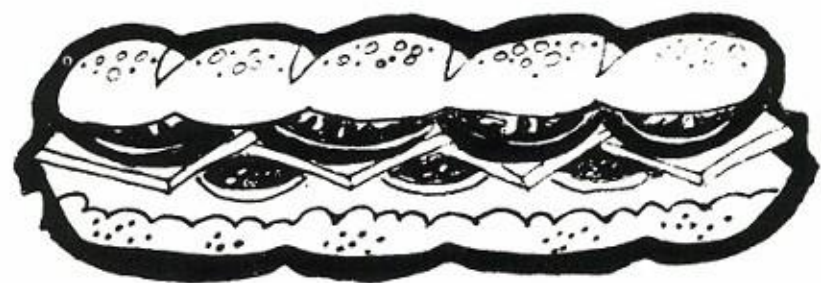

New York style sub sandwiches became popular, especially at Subway.

The senior stage is one of the enjoyable places to eat in the cafeteria for Tony Agnelli and Yolanda Lipinsky.

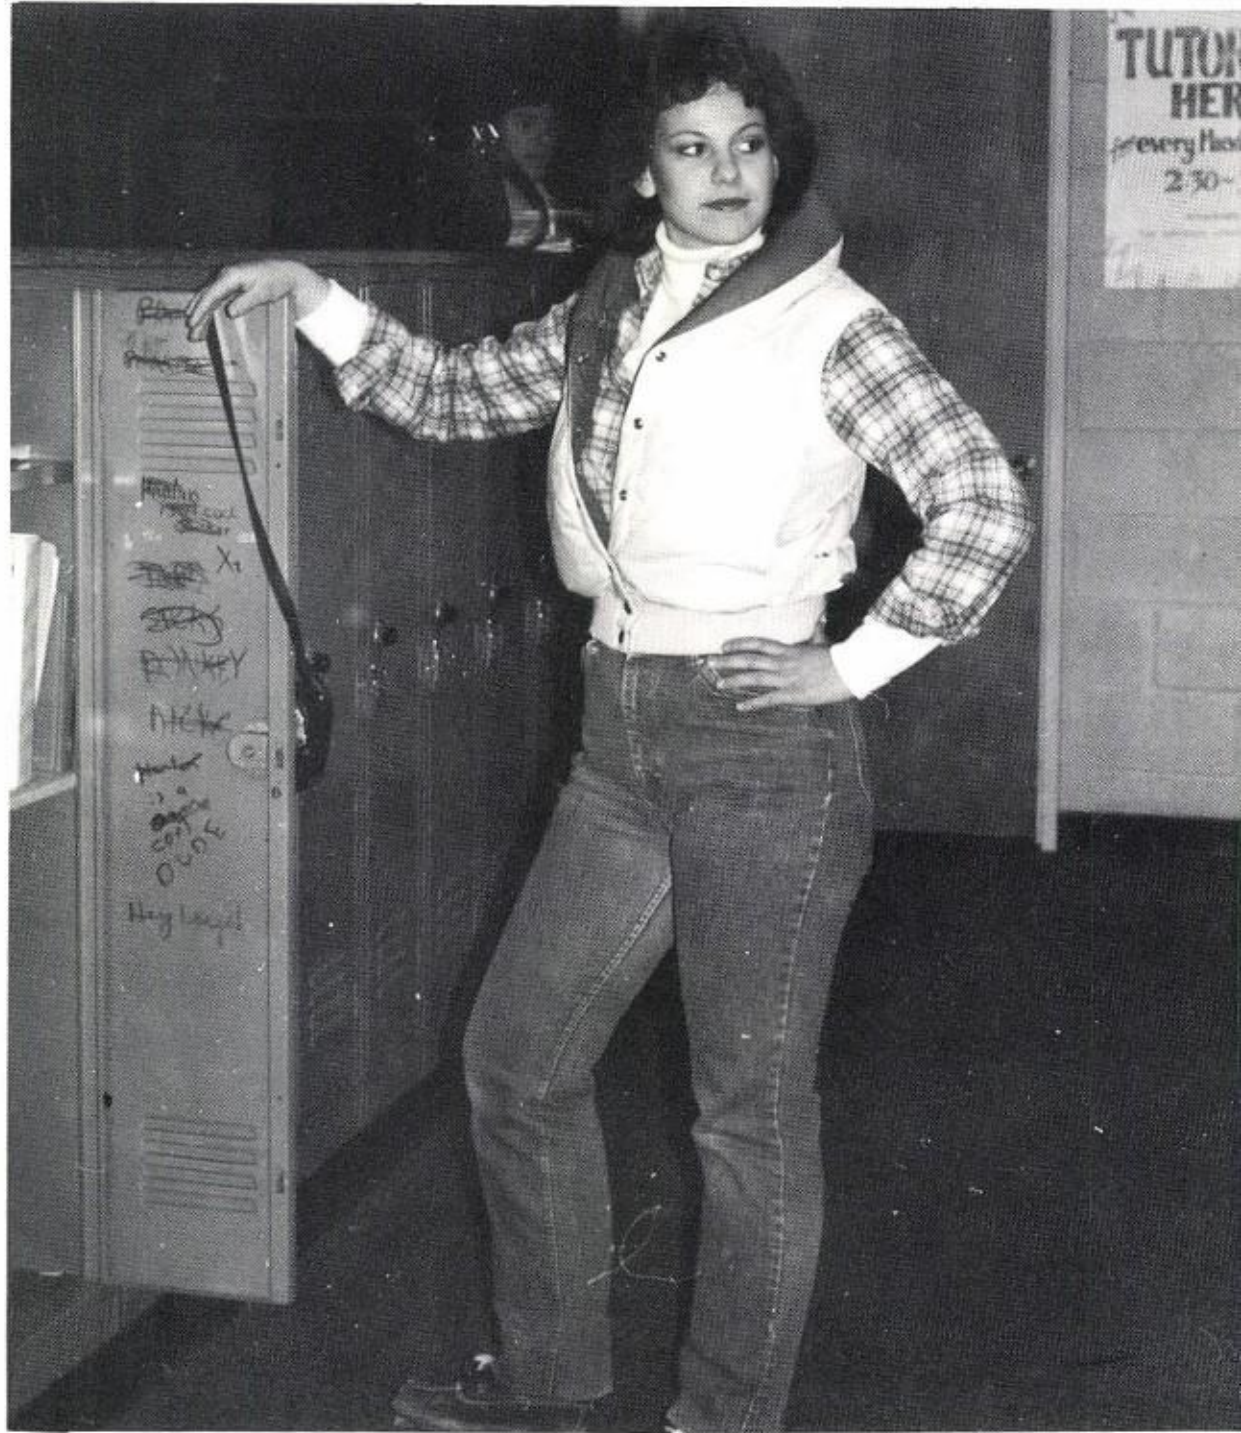

Candy is a favorite food of many, sold by the box full at the Senior Snack Bar.

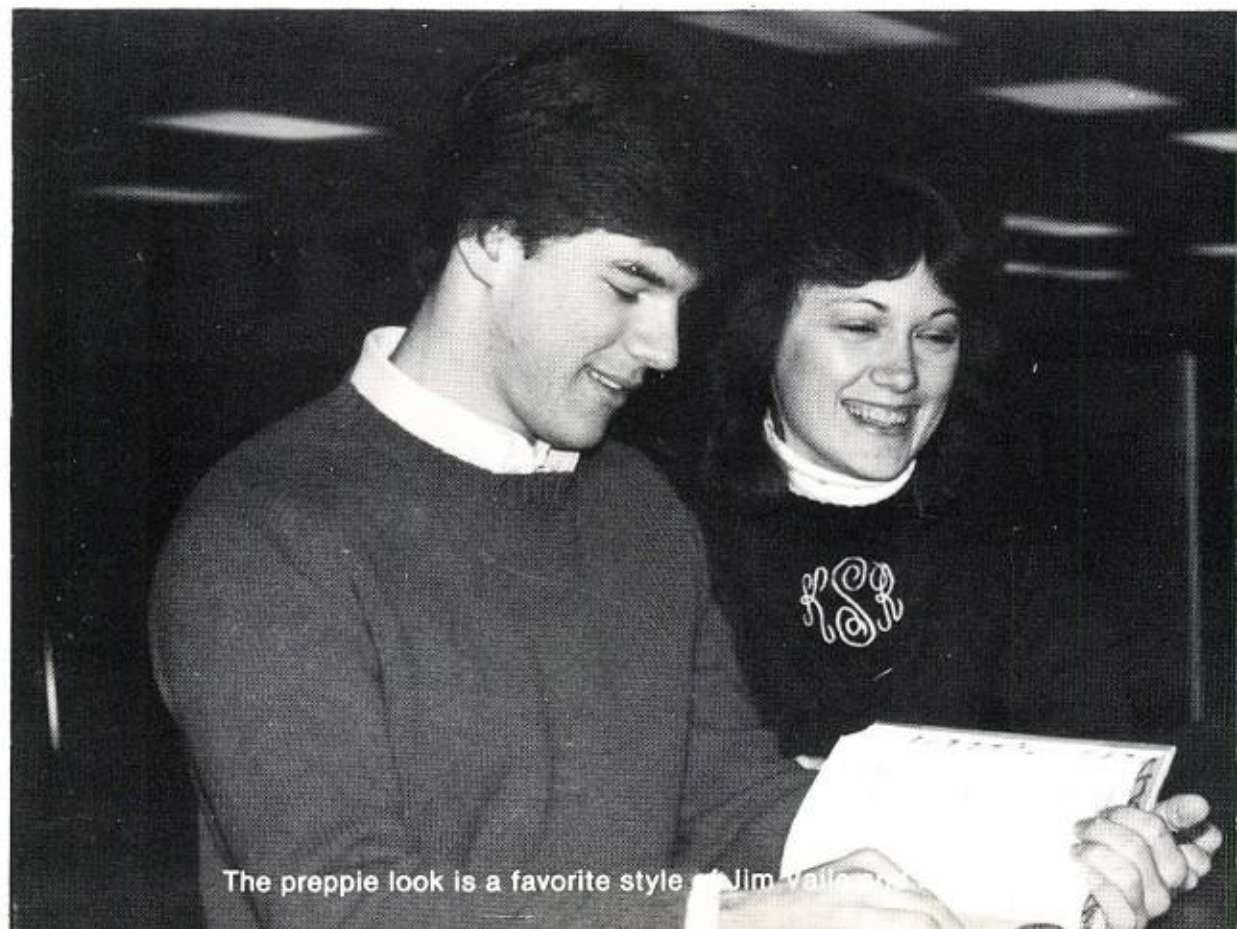

THE FASHION SCENE

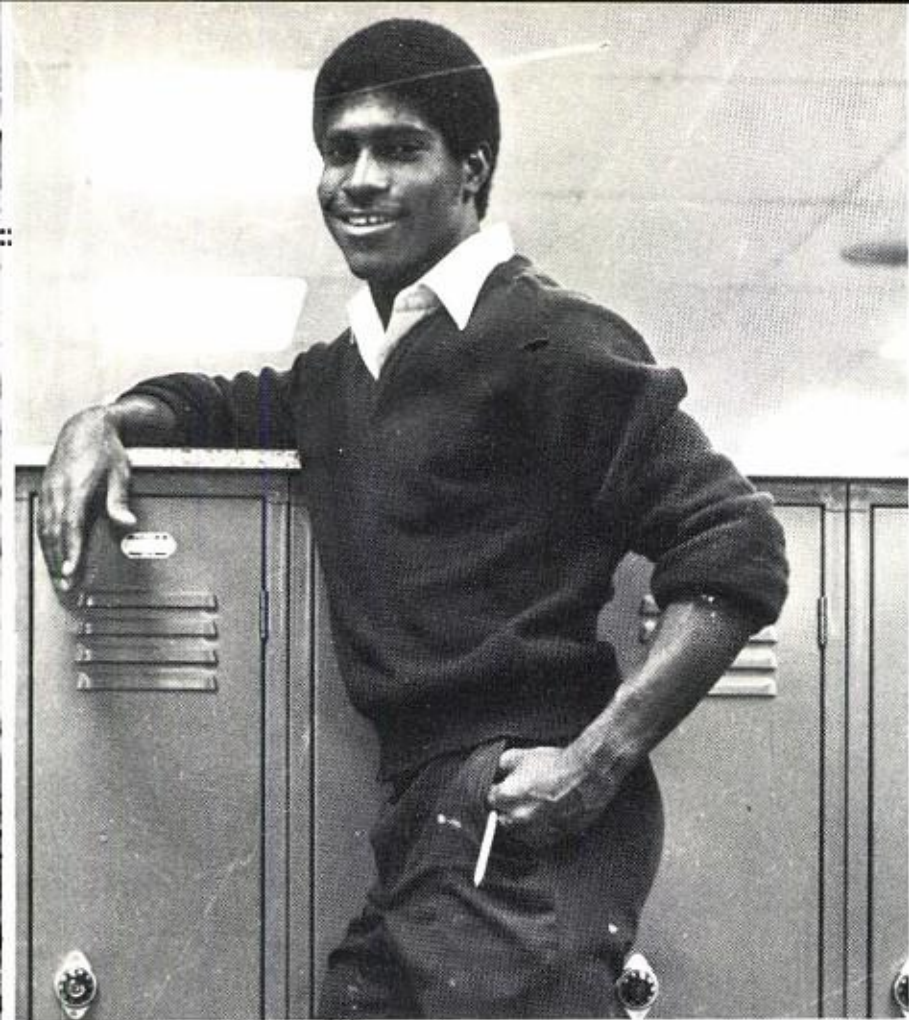

From preppie to punk, or western to sophisticated, it was obvious that a wide variety of styles and fashions were "in." The preppie look included Cheenos, dockside shoes, argyle socks, Bermuda bags, changeable belts and buckles, oxford shirts, ribbon ties, woven barrettes, and Izod shirts. The punk scene was typified by colored hair spray, safety pin earrings, fatigues, tight-legged pants, and jungle print shirts. The punk scene also helped initiate the black, bronze, gold, and silver fashion boom. The western scene was the usual: cowboy hats, boots, jeans, plaid shirts, and suede or leather vests. The sophisticated look also brought back a traditional look, with straight skirts with slits, plain shirts, and pants with gathers at the top. For boys, the sophisticated look usually consisted of 3-piece suits without a tie. The all-American look was the most popular this year, although it was mixed with the designer look. Concert T-shirts and surf shirts were worn with designer jeans and Levis. Even though some kept their outfits within the coordinated categories, many preferred to mix them. Many of the stylish fashions we wore added color and variety to the school, but somewhere out there, there is another fashion yet to be discovered.

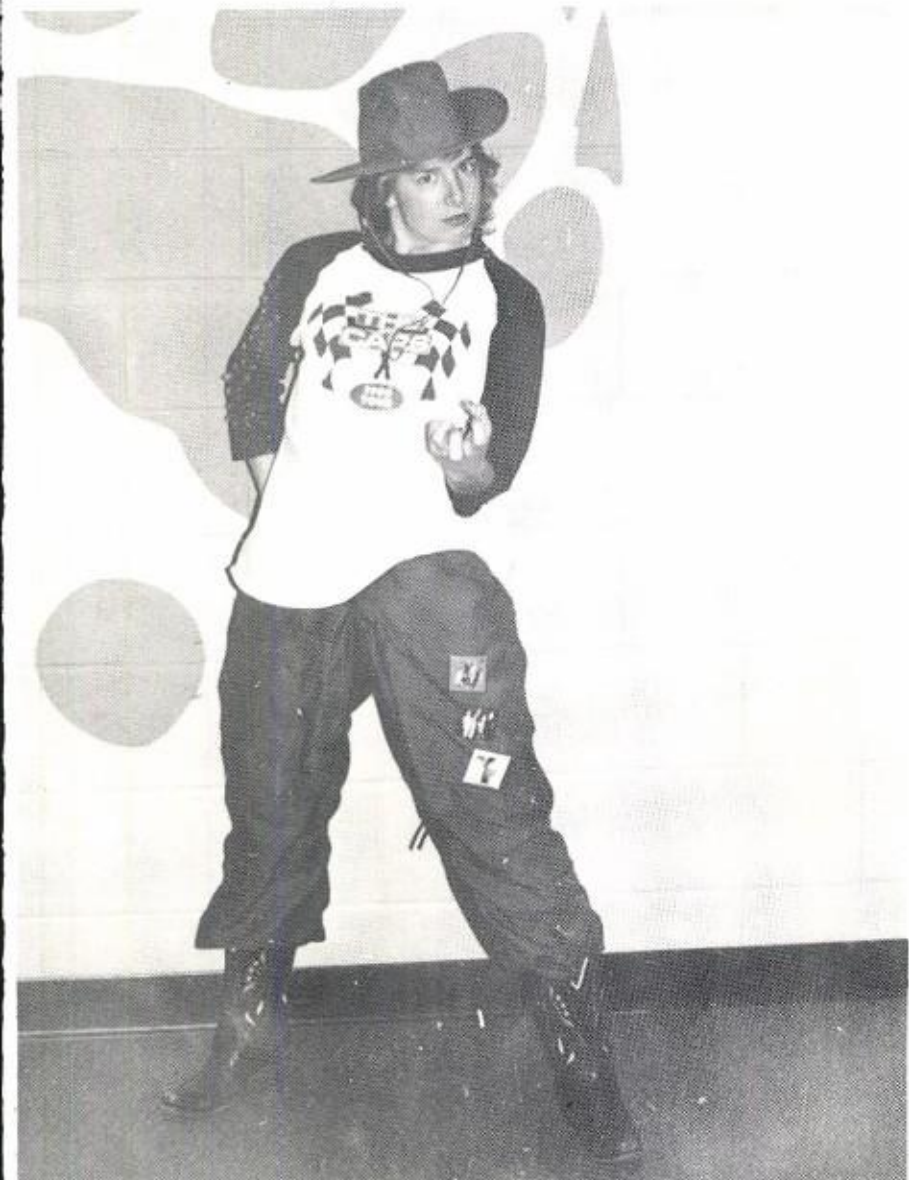

Ski vests and flannel shirts are popular during the cold winter months. (Yvette Parsons)

Jori,

I am very glad we are good buddies. Good thing we are going to get a good grade in Spanish. Jo will, I Jo is not very bright; skipping and drinking - Jo's a waste case, Jo, even though sometimes I tease you about what happens with you and who ever I'm just kidding. No matter what I'm just kidding even though ~~Jo~~ I think it's true. Not just kidding. Jo, Jo, Jo, I hope that you and I are in the same Spanish class next year along with Jo, but I don't want to take Spanish unless we get Mrs. Harrell. RIGHT else, Heather has to be in our class along with Lynnie. During the summer either you'll have Jo visit me or I'll have to visit you. I still am not sure where you live, but I'll find it. Maybe I'll go to your pool which you better be at. Do you know how many times you and Jeff broke up and you said, "I'm never going to get back together with him and you did." ~~Jo~~ many times that I can't count them but it's a good thing because Jeff is my buddy and I'm glad for him and for you also. Someday you will have to see a BLUEJAY game. Some times during the summer if you have some time maybe I can go to your house to visit you or visa-versa. You know Spanish class was really fun and with out you it would have been terrible. Remember at the beginning of the year when Mrs. Harrell kept moving me around until I got by you and Jo. Then Jo had to move. Then it was just me and you. When Jo was there it was even more fun because we never got in any fights. You and I seriously never got in any fights. Well, I remember one when you told me I had a lot of nerve and I got angry. And then for the next week I ~~was~~ would never say anything unless it had something to do with schoolwork or Spanish. That wasn't very nice of you to say that. How do you like my picture of you know who. I think it's a pretty good picture - The key that makes it a perfect picture is the stance. I hope next year we are in the same class. We were in the same P.E. class and you almost hit me with your bat. That would have been your fault. Looks like I'm running out of room so I guess I'll go to the next good writing

Before school, Rob San Martin quickly finishes his algebra 2-trig homework.

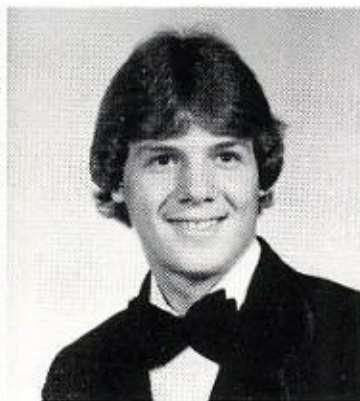

At last! We were seniors. The moment we had strived for, through eleven grueling years of school, had arrived. Through homework assignments, putting up with teachers and parents, and growing up, somehow, we all knew our senior year would be great. There would be fun and laughter, tears and sorrow, but we would make it. Although each member of our class of 711 individuals had his own special memories of senior life, together everybody looked forward to the day we could declare our mission accomplished and prepare for our next adventure.

for the next week I ~~was~~ would never say anything unless it had something to do with schoolwork or Spanish. That wasn't very nice of you to say that. How do you like my picture of you know who. "Please move a little to the right ... Now, look at me and ... smile!" These were just some of the words that could be heard coming from rooms J101 and J102. To students passing by, these statements may have seemed unimportant, but to the seniors inside, this was no routine procedure. The taking of Senior pictures was uneasy for many due to slipping drapes, stiff tuxedos, and uncomfortable stools. But with all the discomforts, Senior portraits marked the beginning of the end of high school for the graduating class.

Wasting no time in letting the school know that the class of '82 was now in charge, seniors gathered on June 20th for six hours to add fresh spirit to the pressbox. Only four days after the last day of school, approximately 10 seniors gave a new look to the pressbox. Among the painters were class president Jay Garant, and vice-president Paul Calobrisi, along with Patty Byrnes, Regina Chin, and Don Vislay. They used paint bought with Senior class funds instead of paint provided by the school. Bear paws were added by Paige George and new numbers were designed for a different look. All in all, the senior class managed to keep alive an old tradition, while adding some new flair.

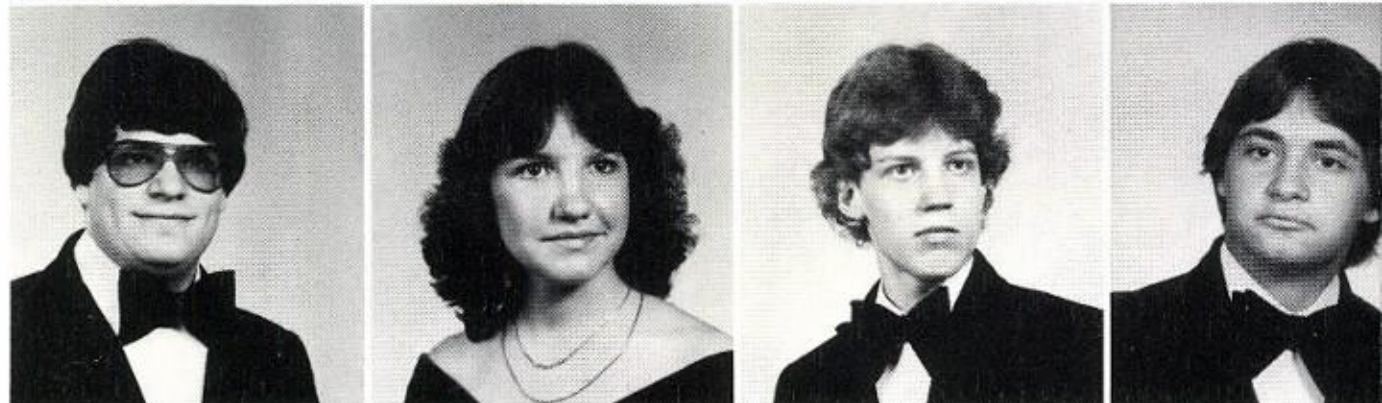

The fresh style of the pressbox portrays the uniqueness of the class of '82.

Under the leadership of four hard working officers, the Class of 1982 entered into their final year with a bang. Jay Garant headed the officers, and he worked very closely with Vice President Paul Calobrisi, Secretary Cheryl Williams, and Treasurer Lisa Magnone. Throughout the year, the officers worked extensively with Mrs. Spage, the Senior class sponsor, in planning such things as the Homecoming float and in deciding which graduation announcements to order. Due to the hard work of everyone involved, the Seniors ended the year with a lot of enthusiasm and showed pride and dignity throughout their last year of high school.

And the Winners Are...

Who would the winners be? That was a question asked by all the girls who participated in the 1982 Junior Miss Pageant. The pageant, held on September 26 at Fairfax High School, determined the district winners who would go on to compete in the Virginia state pageant. From the Annandale-Springfield district, 11 of the contestants were from Lake Braddock. These included Cindy Ackerman, Kristy Benton, Sue Bova, Ann Drake, Laura Essman, An Huang,

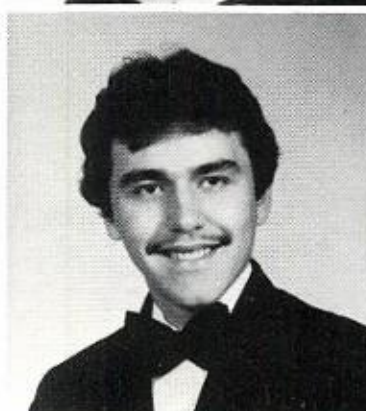

Lee Ocker, Theresa Orme, Stacy Staats, Barbara Wilbur and Cheryl Williams. Each contestant was judged for poise and appearance, physical fitness, creative and performing arts and scholastic abilities. Sue Bova and Kristy Benton were awarded first place and first runner up awards respectively for physical fitness, while An Huang won for scholastics. After these awards were given, six semi-finalists were announced from each district. As Ann Drake related, "Right before, everyone was real excited and they kept wishing each other good luck. Barbara Wilbur and An Huang were among the six semi-finalists chosen from the Annandale-Springfield district. Each finalist then had to answer a question in front of the audience for the final judging. Although none of our girls made it to the state level, they all agreed that the Junior Miss Pageant had been one of their best experiences."

Keeping with the theme for the Homecoming festivities, the Senior class produced a Fall Follies skit that pertained to "Bruins In American History." In the skit, Barney Bruin had to decide which group he wanted to join. He took a look at the National Honor Society, the "Smokers," the "Singers," and the "Sports Fans" for the years 1950 and 1981. Finally, Barney decided that he wanted to be a member of the Class of 1982. Some of the participants included Erik Wilhelm, Jay Garant, Yvonne Zambo, Jason Feer, Janet Delaney, and Cheryl Williams. Despite a superb performance by the cast, the skit received only a fourth place finish.

In the Senior class' Fall Follies skit, Andrea Baines, and Leigh Borghesani portray National Honor Society members.

Spirit of '76

Everything was in an uproar at Paula Cullerton's house as Seniors busily worked on the construction of their Homecoming Float to be displayed Oct. 10th at the game against Chantilly. Contributing to the float's construction were Paul Calobrisi, Jay Cohen, Paula Cullerton, Dara Dickson, Jay Garant, and Mark Martinez. However, each member of the Senior class had the distinct honor of making at least one flower during the flower-making party in homeroom. Illustrating the theme, "Bruins in American History," the float portrayed the "Spirit of '76"-the fife player, the drummer, and the flag bearer. Although we did not win first place, Senior spirit did not suffer enabling the "Spirit of '82" to live on.

Mrs. Spage, the Senior class sponsor, was greatly appreciated by the graduates of 1982. Working together with the class officers, she succeeded in getting the Senior class several previously denied privileges such as Senior Parking and selling candy at soc-hops, as well as continuing the Senior Cafe and Senior Snack Bar. The class officers under her guidance worked for their goal of a free graduation and a free prom for everyone by raising money from the selling of Senior class t-shirts, a Senior class poster, and money-saving coupon books. When asked to comment on her first year as sponsor, Mrs. Spage said, "The class of '82 is without a doubt one of the finest classes to pass through Lake Braddock. The diligence of the officers and the enthusiasm of the class made my job super simple." The Senior class was extremely grateful to Mrs. Spage for helping to make their last year of high school the best one.

Preparations

As early as November, seniors were making plans for graduation. First, friends helped to measure each other's heads for caps during homeroom. Then came ordering the correct size gown. The colors for caps and gowns was the traditional purple for the boys and gold for the girls, unlike last year's purple and white. Also came the chance to buy graduation announcements from the Herff-Jones Company on the senior stage. In addition, seniors could buy name cards, memory books, and key chains. Even though graduation was still six months away, time seemed to be passing quickly. As the senior class made their first preparations for graduation, they sparked new excitement which would last all year.

When I Grow Up...

Seniors had many decisions to make as to what to do after high school. 72 percent of the Seniors would go on to a four year college, 6 percent to a two year college, and 12 percent would go either to a technical school or a job. For others, there were still an infinite number of possibilities. Some choices for Seniors were:

"A Physical Therapist"	Kim Moore
"A Nurse"	Sheri Nidiffer
"President of the United States"	Susan Hamel
"A Bio-Medical Engineer"	Julie Repass
"A Hotel Manager"	Laura Danzi

During the first couple weeks of school, each Senior homeroom was asked to choose a representative. This person was responsible for attending all class meetings that were held about once a month in subschool six. The meetings were conducted by class president Jay Garant. He gave the representatives Senior news, and they relayed the news to their classmates in homeroom. Class news pertained to such things as planning the Homecoming float, ordering graduation announcements, and making more money for the class in order to have a free prom. In the end, the meetings turned out to be a big help to everyone involved and provided a means of communication for the Senior class.

During a Senior class meeting, Jay Garant discusses Senior parking privileges with the representatives.

Gathered together at Candidates' Night on October 29 was an important group of Northern Virginia politicians. The six people running for a place in the House of Delegates from the 51st district, Mike Hershman, Vivian Watts, Lee Strang, Jim Dillard, Larry Pratt, and Bob Harris, were present to speak about such issues as abortion and education, along with answering questions from the audience. Representatives for the candidates for Governor, Lt. Governor, and Attorney General were also there. Nikki Coleman, wife of gubernatorial candidate Marshall Coleman, spoke about her husband's campaign and answered questions. Richard Saslaw represented democratic candidates Chuck Robb, Dick Davis, and Jerry Baliles. Afterwards, the details of the four bond issues were discussed. The turnout for Candidates' Night was exceptional, and, all in all, the evening was a very informative one.

Yum! Yum!

Well you bring it to Spanish. If you don't go to your pool ~~then~~ then I doubt I will see you because I might go to your pool over the summer but if you not there then how can I see you. I don't know if I can come visit because I don't want to see your parents. I'm paranoid about meeting peoples' parents. So either you go to the pool or come to my house. you bring the drinks. I'll never forget the good flicks we saw in Spanish. Some day I'll have to see your HBO TV. I think it is better than super TV because it runs all the time. I hope we're in the same Spanish class again.

Every day after school from 2:30 until 3:15 the Senior Snack Bar was open to serve the students. Averaging $55 per day from the sales of coke and candy, the snack bar donated the profits to the class treasury and the Senior prom. The snack bar managers, Paul Calobrisi, Mike Elliot, and Jay Garant, had a great responsibility to their fellow students. Each day they had to get the ice, set up the coke machine, set up the candy, clean up afterwards, and count money and candy, while still providing quality service to make the Senior Snack Bar a valuable "asset" to the class of '82.

Personal Preferences

When asked what some of their likes and dislikes were, Seniors responded by saying:

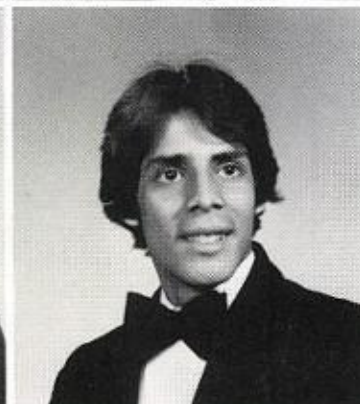

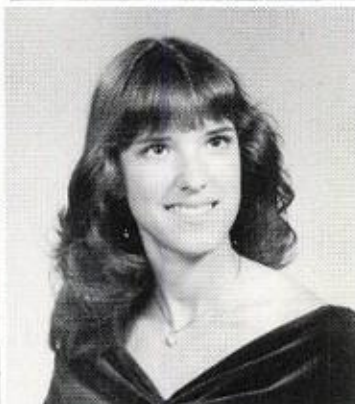

I love:
weekends, partying, senior pranks, senior skip day, socializing in the halls, graduation, graduation parties, getting drunk, football games, ice cream, friends, Friday's, snow days.

I hate:
getting up, sitting still, running 6 in 30's, research papers, seives, final exams, college applications, five paragraph essays, homeroom, cafeteria food, SAT's, saying good-bye.

Classy T's

Why were so many people standing around one table on the Senior stage in mid-November? To order class t-shirts, of course! The baseball style shirts were white with yellow sleeves and purple writing. The front of the shirt had the Senior class emblem on it, and the names of all 711 seniors were listed on the back. Running down the sleeves the word "Bruins" was printed symbolizing the school pride felt by all of the Seniors. The shirts were available for $10 each with the profits going towards the Senior Prom. Although the shirts were ordered at the beginning of the year, everyone was looking forward to the end and the possibility of a free prom.

Just Drifting Along

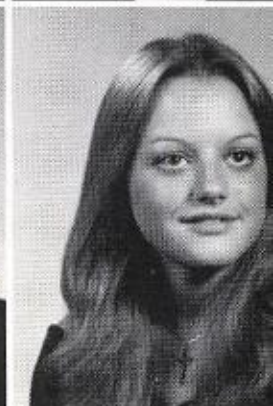

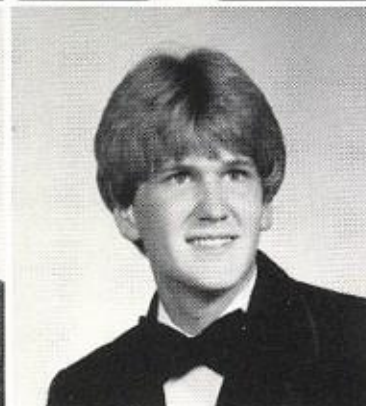

First there was the mad rush to get college applications in before the deadline and the incredible pressure to keep grades up. Then finally, there was relief, and the Seniors could drift into that relaxing state of mind traditionally called "Senior Slump." Schoolwork was no longer a top priority, and the attention span during class lowered considerably. What was everyone thinking about? Graduation, summer, and "planning my weekend" were just a few things, but mostly, Seniors were in a daze. Nothing registered except for information concerning graduation. The days went slowly and seemed to stop just days before graduation because it was so close at hand. But after four long years of high school, June 14 was the day that Seniors became free and came back to life for the summer.

Standing Ovation**

November 30 marked the date of the first Senior class meeting. Held during 2nd period, the officers finally had the chance to go over some class business. Class Treasurer Lisa Magnone explained the class finances, while President Jay Garant told the Seniors about "Buck Passers," coupons sold in booklets to help raise money for the class. Details about the prom were given by Secretary Cheryl Williams. The big event of the meeting was brought to the class by Vice President Paul Calobrisi and a band of beautiful ladies; it was the Senior Superlatives Awards Show. As Paul announced the nominees, the ladies brought out the superlative winners, as voted by the class, in sealed envelopes. The highlight of the awards presentation was when John Reynolds was announced as the most individualistic male and received a standing ovation from the audience. The class of 1982 proved once again that it was still the best class in the school.

During the semester break in January, while everyone else was rejoicing over the fact of no homework, approximately 121 juniors and Seniors were en route to Sugarbush, Vermont for four days of fine skiing and fun times. After travelling for twelve hours by bus, the group, headed by Shawn Bevan, Jay Garant, Garth Lasater, and Dale Rye, arrived in Sugarbush, checked into the Alpen Inn, and enthusiastically hit the slopes. Racing down the mountain on the crystal snow, both novices and experts alike took advantage of the opportunity to perfect their techniques. Finally, after many successful runs and many near disasters, the skiers, exhausted but satisfied, returned home. Dale Rye commented, "It was the wildest skiing party I've ever been to."

As the final year of high school began, many Seniors decided to end the fight against good grades and join the F.G.S.S. (Former Good Students Society). An organizational meeting was held in mid-November, and over thirty members were admitted into the club. The admissions process was easy; a Senior was automatically admitted if he had been kicked out of the National Honor Society or if his grade point average fell during the Senior year. In its second year, the F.G.S.S. was in favor of continual partying, forgetting schoolwork, and having fun. The society's secretary, Leslie Brown, commented, "We're doing our best to do our worst."

What was it that most Seniors saw as they looked back through their four years of high school? Some of the Seniors responded as follows:

My most memorable time was...
"the good times I had with my friends."- Diane D'Orazio
"my last marching band performance."- Becky Leberdecker
"Mr. Denton's Preferred Frog."- David Widdifield
"getting in a ketchup fight in the Shenandoah Mountains with someone who couldn't lose."- Laurel Heneghan
"Mr. Cabiati's English class."- Chip Lauria
"the fun times working on the 1981 yearbook staff."- Rob Pflughardt

Many steps were involved in getting into college. One of the most important was taking the SAT's. Most colleges required the SAT for admittance, so Seniors made sure that the test was taken by December. This meant registering for the test before the deadline and studying for the test beforehand. But probably the hardest thing about the test was getting up early on Saturday to take the SAT. As Seniors drudged into the school to take the test, they struggled to stay awake long enough to finish. Afterwards everyone waited anxiously for the results and hoped that their scores would get them into the college of their choice.

Hello folks , John Alwood here.
As principal of Lake Braddock,
I have had many opportunities to come in contact with many various types of Students. The most intriguing of these by far have been the Students of the Class of '82. Well, not many people know this, but I am also a psychic. So I asked myself , "John, why don't you see what lies in store for some of these Students?" So you know what? I used my Sixth

FLIGHT CREW

Jori,
 We made it!
 It's finally the end of the year. I hope that you will remember all those lectures in Mr. Becz's class.
 That class was great for a short nap.
 All those test and remember those labs.
 Well thanks to that nice Chinese guy who helped me with those really hard ones. Now we are both going on to bigger and better things "Physics"
 I don't think I will ever forget Coy's yokes in Algebra II. How about that pen that's on the wall! Ha ha! Congrats about being elected Sec. of class of 84! I hope your Junior year is just as exciting as mine was. Be good and also have a blast
 this summer!
 See ya
 around
 Love
 Carol
 P.S. Watch out for Coy
 this summer!

Enthusiastic seventh and eighth graders sign their names to SS I's welcome back bulletin board.

"Attention! All flight crew personnel please report to your stations!" Take off was scheduled for 0815 from either homeroom or first period classes. As the launch alarm sounded each day, thousands rushed to their allotted spaces to begin their assigned tasks. A high level of activity and steady concentration was maintained through six to seven periods, taking time out only for homeroom meetings, break and lunch shifts. Extra participation also came in class meetings, school-wide pep rallies, sport gatherings, dances and individual class events. After a year full of flight schedules, grades seven through eleven felt a sense of accomplishment in having executed another perfect landing. Even though everyday brought new obstacles to overcome, each class knew they were still ahead of the race.

FAST PACE

Setting a fast pace for their junior year came easily since they were the Class of '83. They began the year located in Subschoools V and VI where they would spend their two remaining years of high school. This new location gave them hard times in finding classes, meeting teachers, and sharing the space with seniors. It also gave the class a feeling of importance, knowing they were finally one of the two top powers in the school. Keeping that feeling strong, they whizzed through Homecoming, ordered class rings, took PSAT's, SAT's, and final exams, and started to think about where they wanted to go to college. Even though the pace they set was fast, together as the Class of '83, they kept it going with spirit and enthusiasm throughout their junior year.

SHOOTING TO THE TOP!

They came sky rocketing into the Homecoming events during October with roaring engines. The special events began on Oct. 13th with the Fall Follies and their skit, "Bruins in History Through Song," along with skits from other classes, clubs, and organizations. Two days later, they toasted in the heat from the blazing flames of the bonfire as it brightened the darkness and cooked a number of Chantilly dummies. Then during the Homecoming game, their float with the theme of "Bruins in Space" was shown by spirited class members along with floats from the other classes. Finally, Saturday came bringing fun in the sunshine at the Fall Festival and a classy evening at the Homecoming dance. After participating in the events of Homecoming week, they all felt they had rocketed sky high and had reached the top.

What was one of the biggest events of the junior year? It was the ordering of class rings! At the beginning of October, envelopes containing pamphlets, blue plastic ring sizes, and order forms were distributed during homeroom. Excitement soon began to vibrate throughout the class as Jostens set up their ring arrangement in SS VI's display case. From that time on, all one could hear was what style of ring and what type of stone one would order. After the actual ordering was accomplished, the Junior class waited many long months until the spring ring breakfast, where they received their rings and began to turn them the traditional 83 times.

JUMP START

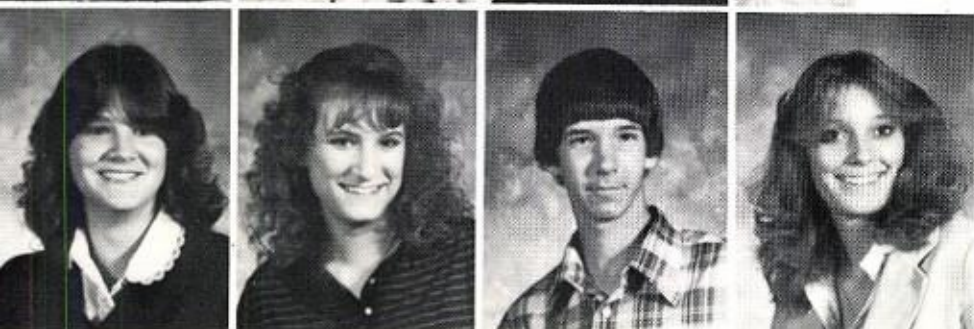

A tremendous roar filled the air as the engines were ignited and the drivers revved their cars to show off their individual power. Power itself was what members of the Class of '83 had from the go signal in September until the last time the bell rang in June. Everyone was involved in harder academic subjects and with the new pluses in the grading scale, they were able to make the high grades that colleges would be looking for in the near future. Many new activities were begun socially when they reached the middle-teen age that made transportation, communication, and overall conversation with others easier. Leaving a cloud of smoke in their wake, the juniors certainly made a jump start toward the finish line they would cross the following year.

In a corner of Subschool VI, numerous meetings of top priority took place throughout the year. The five masterful minds created the words and laws the class would follow. These powerful people were the class sponsor, Mrs. Colocotronis, and the four officers, Greg Cabrinha, Chip Rives, Mike LaSavage, and Stacia Ahearn. As leaders, they held many events to benefit their class and to make the treasury savings a tidy sum. Over the summer, they began their work at Camp Varsity and then went on to hold the first fund raisers such as car washes and bake sales to cut prom costs. They also organized the selling of cider at the bonfire, a number of dances, spirit week, the ring breakfast, and the Junior Prom in May. Junior year was a success and the Class of '83 greatly appreciated the five hard workers that made it all happen.

During the course of the year, many juniors felt they had undergone numerous changes in their school, academic, and social lives. Once they realized that there was only one more year to complete after their junior year they grew up fast, hit the books, surveyed college manuals, and entered the late night study scene on weekdays and the rowdy social scene on the weekends. Whether the change was for the better or for the worse, each student pulled through and rolled with the changes.

After the first quarter was finished and grades had been given out, the question was asked- "What do you think of your junior year so far?" According to Jeff Peterson, it was just a regular year, or as he expressed it, "Another one bites the dust!" Clint Hambeck said he felt, "It's no problem with my grades; it's a breeze." While others agreed with Terry Ashwell that the year "...is stupid and history's so booooring." In the same tone David Foster hoped that "Maybe my senior year will be better!"

"Being a junior is a new experience. You begin to realize that you'll soon be on your own. Sometimes you begin to think...will I ever see any of these people again? This year we'll be saying good-bye to many of our senior friends and once again we'll be wondering--will we see any of you again?"

Kelly Sullivan

"It doesn't seem possible that next year we will be seniors, and then off to college. This junior year has gone by so quickly! So many new things have happened! We are all realizing we have to start making some important decisions. Even still, the year is fun and exciting."

Renee Forcier

"We've finally made it! It's funny though, I didn't feel like a junior at first, but now that school has started it's all coming together. I guess it's time to start growing up!"

It happened in the early morning hours on Saturday, October 31st-Halloween Day. Most of the members of the junior class arrived at school before 8:30 a.m. to take the PSAT's. Broken up into six sections of 30 minutes each, verbal and mathematical knowledge was tested. When the answer sheets and test books were finally turned in after twelve noon, the ordeal was over. With their brains running on empty, the students somehow managed to make it out of the building and on to their homes to try and complete the rest of the day as normally as possible. For most, it wasn't until the following morning that their brains reenergized themselves and began to resume normal functions.

SAY WHAT?

"It's the feeling of being almost there, and yet too far away to see any of it. Although I am not a senior, the desire to get out of here is definitely present. But I don't find it hard to live it out-one day at a time...one day it will all be over, thank God!"

WINNING THE CHECKERED FLAG

Time ran out on June 18th as the official clock clicked off the final minute on the last day of school. A wild roar of exhilaration shook the building as hundreds of students went home to begin a summer filled with good times. Teachers gave a sigh of relief after saying farewell to those students who "will never change," while smiling after those who had become their friends. Members of the junior class turned to each other in wonder of being official seniors and knowing that after the upcoming summer it would be one year to freedom. As the hallways filled with debris from the empty lockers, the last few students cleared the building with that checkered flag tight in their grasp!

Enthusiastic and full of ideas was how the Class of '84 entered the new year. Starting off with a bang, the sophomores ran off with second place in the Homecoming float contest. If that wasn't enough encouragement, perhaps it was the thought of reaching that long awaited day. They were sixteen and the last of driver's ed. had finally crept around, so off to the DMV to attain the driver's license! Within the sophomore class was a bit of uniqueness. In addition to elected officers, there were about twenty-five students who made up a council which contributed ideas to help make the student activities successful. Motivation and spirit certainly seemed to get the class off to a head start in a year of races.

As the engines roared and the excitement permeated the air, the sophomores were more than anxious to get off the starting line. Tension was building and the class couldn't wait to begin their race into the new year. The apprehension eased somewhat as the sophomore float won second place in the first heat of the competition. There was great participation in other Homecoming events, including the "Bruin Paul Revere" skit in Fall Follies, a mouse trap booth at the Fall Festival, and Chris McIntyre and Kathy Forgas were on the Homecoming Court representing the class. With all this spirit and enthusiasm in the first few heats, the race was looking good for the Class of '84.

ENGINES

STARTED

What could be more exciting than finally getting a driver's license? Sophomores awaited their turn to take a quarter of driver education. Which quarter they were to have it depended on their age and their last name. Those who were older and who had names at the beginning of the alphabet had first priority. A period of learning driving rules, laws, terminology, and cautions replaced a full period of physical education, which many didn't mind at all. After classroom education, they had to finish fourteen hours of behind the wheel, thus spending a period every day for two weeks actually driving on the road. For many sophomores, waiting to have classroom and behind the wheel education was hard, but the anxiety was worth it when the engines finally started.

CHECK POINT

Hoping for a better means of communication, the administration decided to hold homeroom classes one day each week. Monday was the day decided upon unless teachers were otherwise notified. Meeting in homeroom for fifteen minutes between first and second periods gave students the chance to catch up on weekend activities with a friend, as well as obtain important information as to what would be happening in the upcoming week. Having homeroom announcements tended to decrease the interruptions over the P.A. system, and the few minutes were used as time for a helpful check point in beginning a busy week.

Could you imagine winning five hundred dollars by matching serial numbers? Sophomore Angela Fragnito did just that when she was the correct caller in WPGC's money game. One morning before school, her sister had tried calling in, but could not get through. Angela gave it a try and correctly matched the serial of her money bill to the corresponding number at the radio station. What a way to start the day!

When tenth graders were asked to comment on what being sophomores meant to them, there was a wide variety of ideas: "I think tenth grade is an excellent year because there are more privileges and a lot more activities to be involved in," said Tina Adinolfi. An anonymous sophomore stated, "I can't wait to drive!" While another said, "Biology is the pits." Lisa Todd said, "The teachers seem to treat us more like equals—the relationship between the teachers and us is a lot better."

A CHANGE

A change came that affected almost everyone in some way. Some felt that the new grading system was a deterrent while others said it was better to see a "B+" on their report cards than a "B." The new scale benefited the students who needed a boost by making it possible to earn that "plus." Some students complained that they were discouraged in receiving a "B" instead of an "A." Maybe in the long run, however, this new way was a change for the better.

again?

If it wasn't one test, it was another. All year long tests were being administered. If it wasn't an English test or a biology test, it was a nationally administered test, or maybe for some, PSAT's. This testing seemed to get old after a while, but it was necessary in completing some requirements for graduation. Such tests were DAT's and minimum competency tests. Sophomores had to look forward to even more grueling tests in their junior and senior years in anticipation of reaching graduation day.

When sophomores were asked "What was the best part of being a tenth-grader?", these were some of the responses heard: "Getting closer to graduation"-Sherry Lee; "Taking driver's ed"-Ken Kuberski; "Not being a freshman"-Florence Novi; "Not being treated like a kid, but not having all the responsibilities that come with being a junior or senior"-Wendy LaRue; "You meet more senior guys"-Stephanie Yauger; "Nothing"-Dani Schmidt; "Everything"-Nancy Myzie. On the whole, it seemed as though there were more positive things to say about being sophomores.

FABULOUS FRESHMEN

"I'm glad that we finally got out of munchkin land," was just one of the many comments made by this year's freshman class after they had at last become official "high schoolers." Becoming freshmen meant that many new doors would be open to the Class of '85. There was a wide range of sports and clubs to participate in that weren't offered before. In addition, some of the many new privileges that the freshman class took advantage of were the smoking lounge and the greater number of dances to go to. Along with the fun, also came the heavier load of classwork and homework to do, because these grades really counted towards the future. The transition from eighth to ninth grade was a big one, but the Class of '85 proved that they could do it with a little work and a lot of spirit!

Success

As the Homecoming football game neared halftime, all were anxiously awaiting the arrival and the parade of the Homecoming floats. Long before the day of the game, the Class of '85 had taken careful steps in the preparation of their float. Several flower-making parties were held at Shannon Souvenir's house. Shannon Souvenir, the class president, commented, "I was really surprised at the way the float turned out. I think it was something our whole class should be proud of!" The freshman class' efforts were rewarded with their third place tie with the Senior float.

The Homecoming Dance proved to be an exciting new experience for this year's freshman class. The band, "Joint Venture," provided live entertainment with a wide range of danceable music. The atmosphere was enhanced with streamers, posters, and other decorations. Since the dress code was formal, the girls wore long dresses, and the guys wore three-piece suits. Along with the music, cookies and punch were served. All in all, the Homecoming Dance proved to be a memorable occasion for all who attended.

VARIETY

"Terrific! Trampoline and ping pong are both filled up, so I guess I end up in weight training."...Signing up for special activities in p.e. was a new experience for freshmen. This process could be good or bad, all depending on whether or not your favorite activity had room for you. Students rushed to sign up for classes such as volleyball, tennis, basketball, archery, fencing and football. These courses were each four and a half weeks long; and at the end of each unit there was a short test. Although nine weeks of health were still required for ninth graders, because of the variety of activities to choose from, p.e. had a new twist.

It was the end of the first grading period, and many students were in need of something to do to get their minds off upcoming report cards. The class of '85 provided a dance for students in grades 9-12 to fill this need. Sound Tech furnished the music, a blend of punk, rock, disco, and pop. Every so often, the pace would slow down with old favorites such as "Stairway to Heaven" and "Free Bird." When students were overcome with thirst, soft drinks were sold for a minimal fee by the Debate Club. Many felt the class of '85's dance was a great way to end the first quarter and an even better way to start a new one.

MICK

MORTISON

It was all over. Mick and his entourage had sung their last tune for the "Tattoo You" tour in Washington. Lucky freshmen who had a ride to the Capital Centre at 2:00 am, or were fortunate enough to have close friends with extra tickets, attended this long awaited performance on either December 7, 8, or 9. To have the "Stones" come to Washington was for some, the highlight of their freshman year. Other groups, like Black Sabbath, AC-DC, Genesis, and Blue Oyster Cult, also made stops in the Washington area. Even though groups such as The Doors, Led Zeppelin, and Lynyrd Skynyrd could not be seen in concert, fans showed their appreciation by buying albums, posters, T-Shirts, and other paraphernalia. Freshmen found the concert scene an exciting aspect of their new high school social life.

PASS THE BUCK

"Get your Buckpassers here!, Support the freshman class!" These and other sales slogans could be heard in Subschool III during the first few weeks of December. Eager freshmen, willing to help build their class fund, sold Buckpassers for $5.00 to their families and friends. What exactly were Buckpassers? They were books of coupons worth up to $200 in discounts from local stores, restaurants, and other area merchants. By selling Buckpassers, spirited freshmen added over $200 to the $4000 already in their class treasury, well on the way to the $10,000 needed by their Senior year.

GIVE US A BREAK!

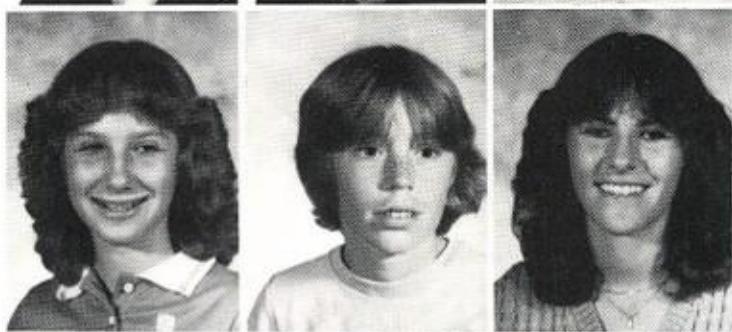

When the class of '86 returned to Lake Braddock for their eighth grade year, they discovered a favorite privilege missing: their break. Last year the seventh and eighth graders had enjoyed as the rest of the school had, a 15 minute break between their second and third period classes. This year, the seventh and eighth graders had lost their break. It had been replaced by a TA (Teacher Advisor) period for 10 minutes. According to one disappointed eighth grader, all they did in TA was "sit around and either do homework or nothing at all." The loss of their break gave the eighth graders another reason to look forward to their freshman year.

WE ARE NUMBER

Lake Braddock may have lost its Homecoming football game 14-0 this year, but it wasn't all bad for the seventh and eighth graders. The intermediate float came in first place in the float contest. The float showed their idea of Bruins in American History which was the theme for this year's floats. The float was huge, showing the faces of the people in Mt. Rushmore, but instead of only 4 faces, there were 5. Right in the middle of the 4 faces was the head of a Bruin whose mouth went open and shut. The name of the float was "Bruins in Rushmore." Congratulations on your blue ribbon, intermediates!

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Believe it or not, the eighth graders won another ribbon. Unfortunately, this time it wasn't a blue ribbon, but a white one. The eighth graders tied with the Keyettes for third place in the Fall Follies. The eighth graders performed a skit and a dance to "Believe It or Not," the theme song from the popular TV show "The Greatest American Hero." The dancers were dressed in purple shirts and jeans. They introduced America's greatest hero: the Bruin Bear. Congratulations, again, eighth graders!

The Class of '86 had three excellent sponsors this year. First, there was Ms. Marsala. She took on being class sponsor in addition to her already "challenging" job of teaching I.B.S. and eighth grade English. Secondly, there was Mr. Studt, an English and reading teacher, who was willing to give up much of his free time to sponsor the Class of '86. Their third sponsor was Ms. Sherwood, an eighth grade social studies teacher, who also sacrificed a great deal of spare time to devote herself to the class. With the help of these special teachers, the eighth graders were able to sponsor their own dance in November and participate in lots of other activities. Thanks Ms. Marsala, Ms. Sherwood, and Mr. Studt, you were appreciated.

Eighth graders had many different feelings about the changes that had gone on in the school since seventh grade. Several students voiced their opinions. Thad Reeves said that even though the classes were easier, he had a lot more homework. Other students, such as Gretchen Short, Shelly Stumpf, and Gary Samf, agreed. Said Gary Samf, "I'm looking forward to ninth grade and finally being in high school. We'll have a break, more dances, and we can participate in high school sports." Christine Kolata agreed and added, "But most of all we won't be picked on for being little junior highers!"

The Class of '86 sponsored the first intermediate dance of the year on Friday, November 20 in the cafeteria. As usual, a large number of students attended the dance. Intermediate dances seemed to enjoy a special popularity, probably because only four were held each year. The four dances were sponsored evenly between the seventh and eighth graders. A band wasn't hired, but a disc jockey played such popular songs as "Smoke on the Water," "Private Eyes," "Another One Bites the Dust," and "Dance the Night Away." All in all, the dance was a great success.

Along with the loss of their break, the eighth graders found other lost privileges this year. One of the most important was the institution of extra cafeteria restrictions. No longer could the eighth graders walk around the school or go outside during lunch. Instead, they were "asked" to stay in the cafeteria for the full extent of the lunch period. This "request" was strictly enforced. Teachers were posted at each exit and sometimes even high schoolers were mistakenly asked what grade they were in, just to make sure they weren't a seventh or eighth grader trying to sneak out early.

This past year, eighth grade teachers tried very hard to encourage their students to develop certain personality traits such as enthusiasm, which was the main theme of the assembly held on December 8. Students who were very enthusiastic in certain areas of school work were awarded special certificates. One student, Nikki Cotton, received 3 of these awards. She received one for straight A's, another one for being the most enthusiastic in her math class, and the third for being the most enthusiastic in her science class. Said Ms. Fleming, the teacher in charge of the assembly, "The awards weren't necessarily for just the straight A, honor roll students; they were just for anyone who was enthusiastic and tried hard in a class."

Although the eighth graders weren't allowed to have cheerleaders, they did have something similar: the drill team. The eighth grade drill team consisted of 24 girls who practiced every Thursday after school. Throughout the year they performed at the halftimes of JV basketball and home football games. Drill team was not only an outlet for the girls' enthusiasm, but it was also good preparation for freshman cheerleading. The girls were looking forward to being cheerleaders and being able to cheer throughout the games.

Another year over and the eighth graders happily said goodbye to junior high and started looking forward to entering high school. Pat Nolan said that he was looking forward to high school because, "then I'll be able to participate in sports and have a break." Whatever the reason, the eighth graders, for the most part, were all looking forward to their freshman year and all the privileges and added responsibilities that would come with it.

BLAST OFF

The first, hectic, confusing, and exciting week of school was probably something the seventh graders would never forget. In their first year, the class of '87 had to get used to many new things, such as lockers, schedules, football games, dances, class night, spirit week, and many more "Jr. High" privileges that they didn't have in elementary school. Not only did they get more privileges, but they also got a lot more work! When you're in seventh grade it seems like the hardest year, but the class of '87 managed to come through it with lots of Bruin spirit and pride.

This year, Homecoming Week was from October 5th through 10th, and the Homecoming theme was "Bruins In American History." One of the many events of Homecoming Week was the Fall Follies, which was when the classes and clubs did skits pertaining to the Homecoming theme. The skits were judged and the winner received $25.00. The seventh graders dressed up in twenties' costumes and sang a song about the football team, which was a parody of the song, "Five Foot Two, Eyes Of Blue." The seventh graders did one of the best numbers in the whole show, and they walked off with second place. One of the teachers commented at the end of the Fall Follies, "The class of '87 was proud to be seventh graders tonight!"

FALL

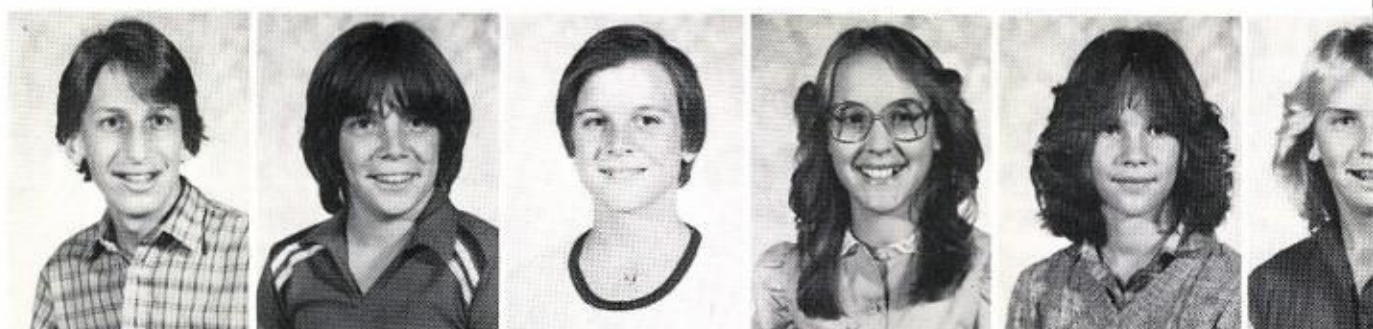

At the Fall Follies, the Class of '87 wins second place with their skit set in the roaring twenties.

FIRST PLACE

This year was the seventh graders first Homecoming, but they participated in all the activities with as much spirit as everyone else. They started off the week winning second place in the Fall Follies, but the best was yet to come. At the Homecoming Game, the floats which were made by each of the classes, were judged, and the intermediates received first place. Even though they're the youngest members of the school, the class of '87 showed they could be the number one class during Homecoming Week.

Homecoming Week came to an end on October 10 with the Fall Festival and the Homecoming Dance. The Fall Festival took place on the blacktop where many booths were set up displaying arts and crafts, games, and food. Also, the Swing Singers entertained throughout the day along with a student band. The formal Homecoming Dance took place that night in the cafeteria with more intermediates than usual attending. When the day was finally over, the entire student body felt that Homecoming Week had been a huge success, and that a good time had been had by all.

SPOOK WITH

SPIRIT!

On Halloween day, the SGA asked the student body to attend school in costume and "spook the Spartans" to show their school spirit for the football game against West Springfield that night. A wide range of disguises such as: female football players, 50's girls, farmers, draculas, witches, and many more flooded the halls. The SGA went throughout the school and gave away candy to the students who dressed up. Also, the SGA room in the cafeteria was turned into a haunted house which was available to the students in costumes. Halloween day was a blast for all those who participated in showing their school spirit.

NO FREEDOM

This year many changes were made in the school, two of which exclusively affected the seventh graders. One change was that their break was replaced by a 15 minute Teacher Advisory period. Another change was in their lunch time. Up until the end of the 1981 school year, the seventh graders were allowed to eat lunch just like every other student- sitting anywhere they wanted and leaving when they were finished eating. This year, however, they had to eat with their homeroom teacher and to sit quietly until they were dismissed from the cafeteria. Even though the students felt that their freedom was being taken away, these two changes were made so the students could have more guidance from the teachers to curb mounting discipline problems.

NIGHT FEVER

On Friday, November 20th, the class of '86 sponsored the first intermediate dance of the year in the cafeteria from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Since it was the first dance for seventh graders, this was considered a big event. Most of the seventh graders were nervous and excited about going to their first dance, but once they got there and started dancing, they were able to relax and have a good time. One seventh grader commented, "I liked the songs they played." By the end of the dance, although they were nervous at first, the seventh graders all felt they had truly become part of the school.

FIRST STEP

Seventh grade is the beginning,
The very first step you take,
When you leave elementary school
behind
And go to the school by the lake.
Grades one through six are now in the past,
And they were fun we know,
But now you're on to bigger things
Where you will learn and grow.
Now you'll go to dances,
Football games and more.
You'll get involved in Spirit Week
And there are sports galore.
You'll find there's lots of homework,
Changing classes, too,
Lockers with combinations....
It's just so much for you!
Trying to find your classes
When you don't remember the way,
Trying to work out your schedule,
And locating your T.A.
The cafeteria hassle,
The mob scene in the hall,
Sometimes you stop and wonder,
If you can handle it all.
But it's good to learn in seventh grade
With lots of spirit and pep,
Because once you've gone thru
this year
You've taken that very first step.

LATE PICTURES

Finding solace in her office, Mrs. Pinto spends time preparing lesson plans.

Glancing through his art books, Mr. Evelyn assists his class in batiking.

As counselor, Mr. Watts determines the times for student activities.

In his Spanish I class, Mr. Cabrera reads over his student's work.

In her chemistry class, Mrs. Fritz teaches a scientific approach to problem solving.

MISSION CONTROL

Doubling as Springfield Independent journalist and teacher, Dr. McCarthy examines a page for the newspaper.

Special emphasis on stricter discipline by the faculty marked the start of a new awareness of school rules and regulations. Teachers tried to follow the major thrust for the year: "To develop a school environment and structure which causes students to be where they belong-on time." The teachers intended to especially watch for being on time, keeping students out of halls and subschools, and trying to stop vandalism. The faculty really pulled together in trying to make their Mission "Control."

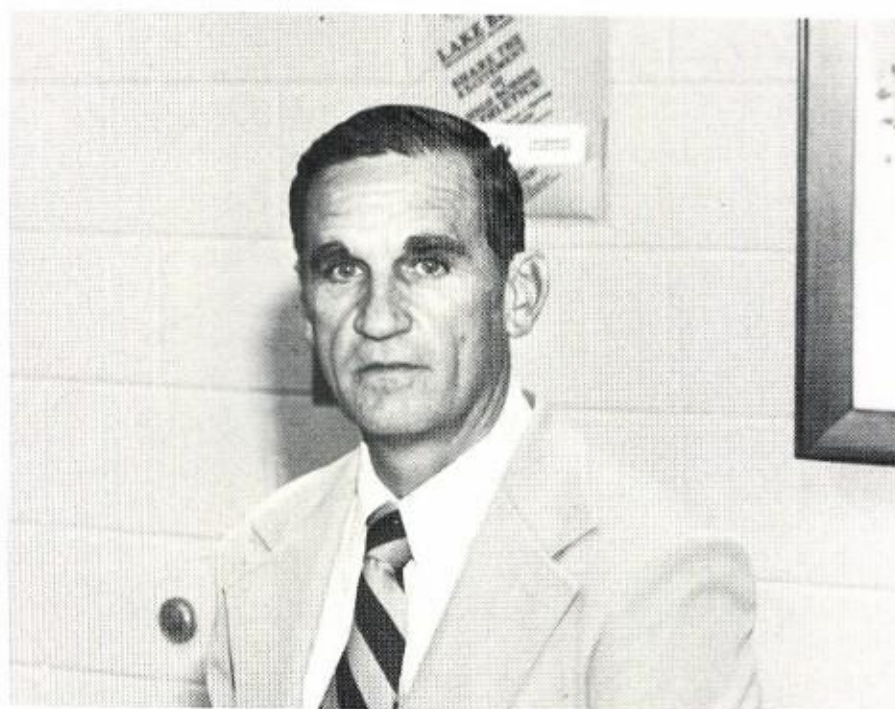

Control & Communications

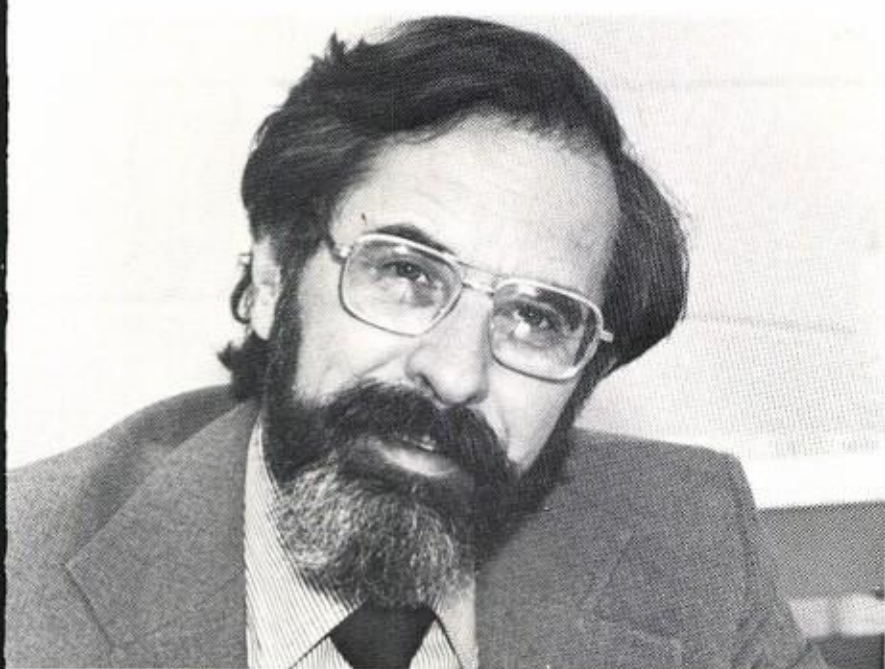

John W. Alwood
Principal

Nancy Bard-Media Coordinator, AV club

Bob Carson-Director of Student Activities

Harry Holsinger-Assistant Principal

Mike Wade-Assistant Principal of Administrative Services

When controlling a school the size of Lake Braddock, one was bound to run into problems. Eliminating the problem of communication was the goal of Mr. John Alwood. Mr. Alwood along with Nancy Bard, Bob Carson, Harry Holsinger, and Mike Wade decided that homeroom would solve a great part of the problem. Homeroom was held once a week, usually on Mondays, to relay general information, such as student picture dates and club announcements, to the student body. On the days homeroom was held, it replaced the fifteen minute break for high school students and the fifteen minute Teacher Advisory period for intermediates. Many teachers felt homeroom helped bridge the communication gap between the administration and the students.

Best Efforts

Throughout school, teachers had asked the students to put forth their best efforts. Once a quarter, Mr. Friend, ninth grade English teacher, asked his students to put forth their best efforts in the form of a single or multiparagraph composition. Before the students attempted to write the paper, Mr. Friend explained the type of composition, the length, and the subject. The students wrote several rough drafts and, at last the final copy. After the papers had been corrected, Mr. Friend, along with many other English teachers who participated in the "Best Effort Paper Program" took an example of a low, average, and high grade paper to a school wide meeting and discussed teaching methods and ideas. Mr. Friend achieved his goal in getting his students to put forth their best efforts through composition.

Teachers at Lake Braddock have numerous degrees and years of teaching experience. Of the 135 teachers surveyed, 85 have Master's Degrees, and 3 have PH.D's. Sixty-eight of those surveyed, however, have taught in a state other than Virginia, and 14 have taught outside of the country. In total, the staff represents 1,466 years of teaching experience.

Breaking Traditions

Traditionally, women had taught girls' p.e. classes and men had taught boys' p.e. classes. That tradition was broken when Mr. Mike Wells began teaching the 9th grade girls' p.e. class. The p.e. department found itself short a female teacher but had an extra male instructor. So, rather than hire a new female teacher and fire a male teacher, the p.e. department decided to have Mr. Wells teach girls' p.e. classes. Most girls noticed little or no difference having a male p.e. teacher. Mr. Wells seemed to enjoy having girls' p.e. classes as much as the girls enjoyed having him as a teacher.

Dear Sir, I've really enjoyed having you in class because you're always smiling and laughing. Of course, if it weren't for you, you probably wouldn't be laughing quite as much. I know you'll never forget this class because of you, Sir, which is the other crazy character who collected every afternoon for an hour of laughs. I know you'll make a great class officer. In 1752, Benjamin Franklin discovered electricity. Two hundred and thirty years later, in Mr. Shoun's Applied Physical Science classes during the first quarter, students rediscovered the basic concepts of electricity. Dally, Mr. Shoun guided his students in understanding electricity and learning how it works. He presented his classes with electrical problems, the tools, and instructions needed to solve these problems along with his assistance, if the students needed it. It might have been said that in Mr. Shoun's classes learning about electricity was a "shocking experience."

Soni, I wish I'd had 100 more students like you this year. You've been an asset to both period, which was already a super class and I'm glad you're an officer. Each year, eighth grade English and history teachers arranged an Out-to-Work-Day for their students. Out-to-Work-Day was a day especially set aside for students to go out and work at a job of their choice. Mr. Magathon and Mrs. Gander were two of the teachers who tried to coordinate this day. Together they wrote up a list of directions and expectations and combined Out-to-Work-Day with a unit that was planned to reinforce interviewing skills and job selections. Although this unit required a lot of work on their part, Mr. Magathon and Mrs. Gander seemed to enjoy planning this day because the two of them liked hearing the students comments after they returned from their jobs.

Compiling a list of directions for Out-to-Work-Day is just one of Mrs. Gander's jobs.

Foreign Cultures

Teachers in the Foreign Language department were well trained and ready to teach various languages. Teaching a specific foreign language was the main objective, but teachers also found time to teach a little about different cultures. Foreign cultures could have been a hard subject to teach if one had not been acquainted with the country on a first-hand basis. This was no problem for the staff. Most of the foreign language teachers had been in a foreign country in which the language they taught was spoken. Teachers gave students tips on restaurants, clothing, and manners. If students ever decided to go out of the country, they not only knew a foreign language, but they had knowledge of the kinds of customs and attitudes to expect.

Computers were of evergrowing importance, not only as a part of many businesses, but also as a learning device in schools. This trend was no exception at Lake Braddock. An Atari 800 computer was granted to Lake Braddock by the county. Many students were taught how to use the computer through their math classes, and, depending on the teacher, other classes as well. Teachers used the computer as an instructional aide to help students understand more about the world of computers after they graduated. As the country progressed into the age of computers, Lake Braddock pulled even farther "ahead of the race."

Helping Mr. Alwood to communicate with faculty and students at Lake Braddock was one of the jobs that Mrs. Dot Yescavage did. Being Mr. Alwood's secretary, Mrs. Yescavage handled the principal's mail, phone calls, and appointments. Additionally, she took notes at meetings. Before she had become Mr. Alwood's secretary in December of 1980, Mrs. Yescavage had worked for the subschool II media center and as subschool III's secretary. Assisting Mr. Alwood with his tremendous task of running our school, Mrs. Yescavage helped in any way that she could.

For the past six years Mr. Ron Axelrod has taught a Holocaust unit, and this year was no exception. During the second quarter he taught the unit again. The Holocaust unit was a study of Jews during World War II. This course lasted for about two weeks, and during that time the students read books, articles, poetry, and had discussions that were all centered around this historical event. Also, Mr. Axelrod had survivors of various concentration camps come in and talk to his students. Teaching this unit helped many of Mr. Axelrod's students to understand the hardships and mistreatment of the Jews in Nazi Germany.

Lake Braddock was such a large school that it required two staffs to run it accurately. Mr. Alwood and his staff were responsible for the people in Lake Braddock, while the custodial staff was responsible for maintaining the school. Among their many duties, the custodians kept the building heated in the winter and cooled in the spring, the halls and cafeteria cleaned, and the general maintenance of the building in operating order. Lake Braddock functioned well, not only because of Mr. Alwood and his staff, but also because of the great custodial staff.

Making cheese sandwiches for "B" lunch is Rita Faudale.

Working in the kitchen to provide lunches for the students was not any easy job. The kitchen help arrived daily at 7:30 to begin preparing food and setting up equipment. The lunch shifts ran from 10:15 to 12:40, and the staff had to feed regular lunches to an average of 1600 students each day. Not only did they fix food for our school, the staff also had to prepare enough food for five satellite schools. Working to supply six schools with lunches, the kitchen staff put in many long hours.

TIME OUT

Kristy Richardson and Heidi Smith await new members for the German Club.

From the Debate Club...to the Pep Club...to S.C.R.E.A.M., Lake Braddock clubs led the race in offering Bruins a variety of clubs for every possible interest. Whether it be school spirit, involvement in social and community service, academic advancement, or just plain fun, there was always an outlet for everyone's creativity. Under the direction of skilled sponsors, the clubs offered students time out from the everyday aspects of in-school life and guided them to a happier, more relaxed year.

Working Together

Elected in the spring of '81, the Student Government Association kept the school running smoothly and efficiently. President Tighe Walker and the other officers were responsible for what was labeled the most successful Homecoming ever. The beautification efforts were also continued by the SGA with the help of the faculty and the student body. Another example of the SGA's continued effort to improve our stay at LB was the long hours they spent modernizing our constitution. As always, the SGA played an active role in the events of our school.

As she scans an important point, Susan Zywokarte prepares her speech.

Coach Vicki Drinnon reviews a debate after the round has ended.

"Millions of children are corporally punished each year without constitutionally required due process." That was the beginning of just one of the many debate cases which could be argued under this year's national high school debate resolution, which was: "Resolved, that the federal government should establish minimum educational standards in elementary and secondary schools in the U.S." To prepare for a year of debate on this topic, nine Lake Braddock students attended debate workshops at area universities. Six students attended an institute at Georgetown University, two attended one at George Mason University, and one student attended an institute at Mercer College in Georgia. In addition to local WCFL tournaments, the team attended invitationals at large universities such as Cornell, Wake Forest, and Harvard. The debate team had a very successful year both at home and away.

As in other years, the seniors occupied themselves with recovering and maintaining senior privileges. "Oish" cards, renamed SPAIB (Senior Privileges At Its Best) cards, were again requested, and denied, however, the senior parking lot and snack bar remained open. Money also played an important role: the selling of candy at soc-hops and the snack bar made possible a free graduation ceremony. All was not work, though, as the students were compensated for their hard efforts by the junior-senior ski trip in early February.

The day's profits are safely handled by Jay Garant.

Business details are discussed by three of the four officers. (Jay Garant, Lisa Magnone and Paul Calobrisi)

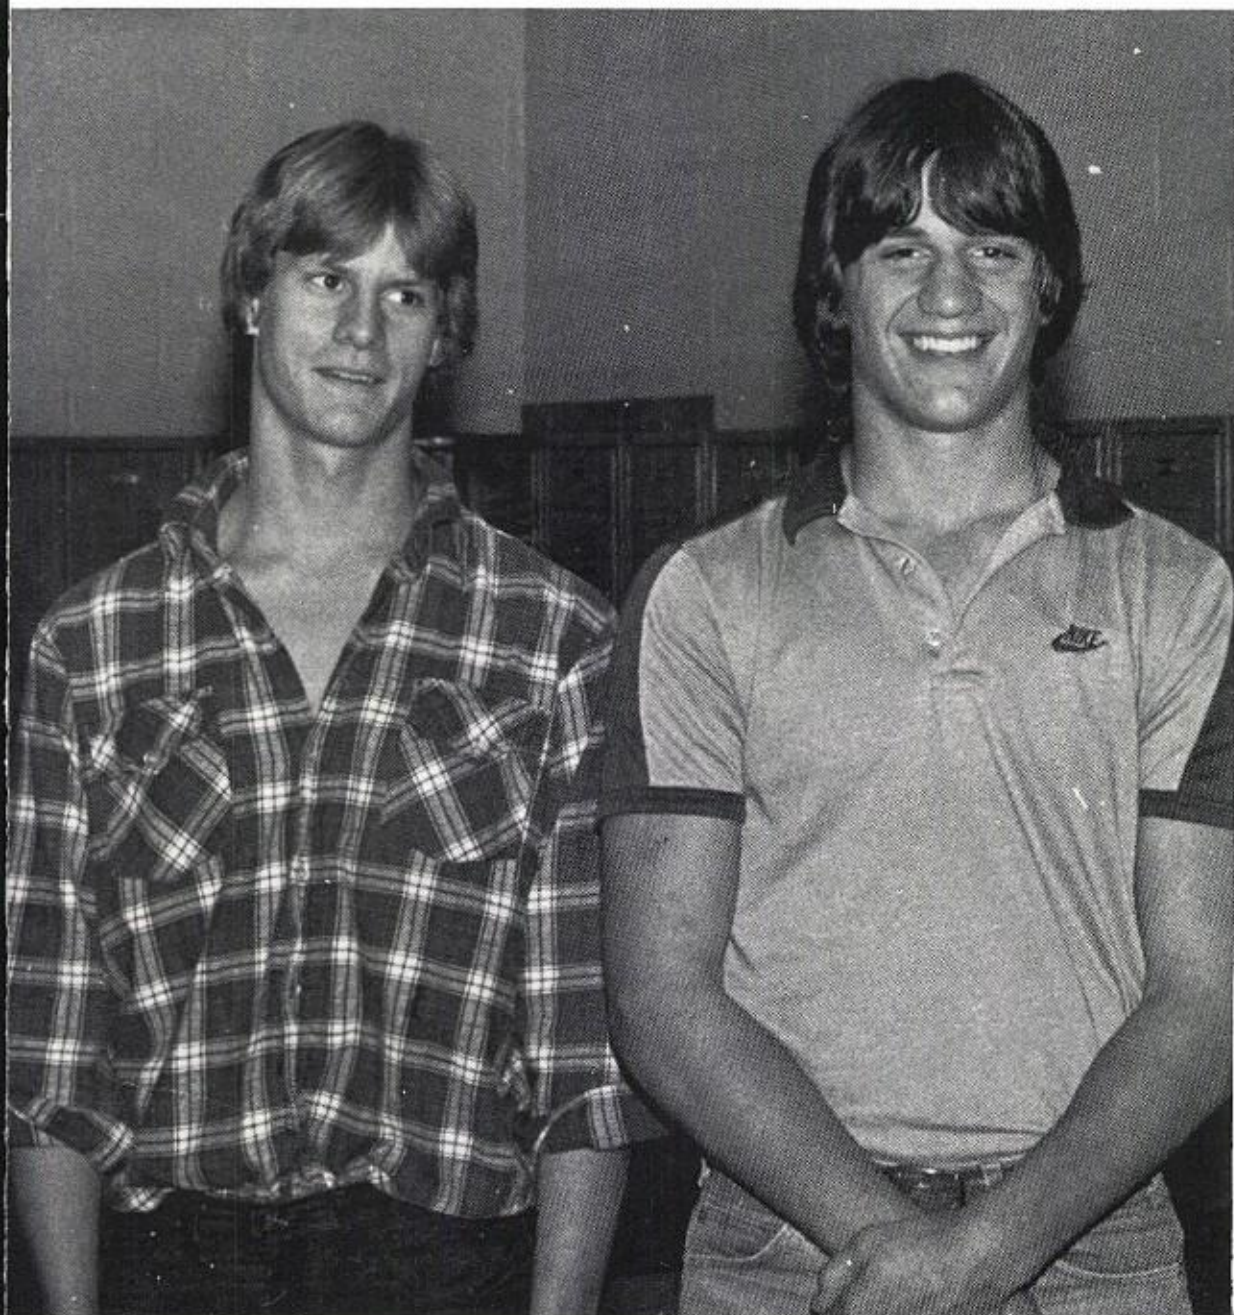

Work at the Senior snack bar is handled by Vice President Paul Calobrisi.

Close To The Top

Part of the Class of '83 leadership, Mike LeSavage and Chip Rives , await the beginning of the discussion on the prom.

While presiding over a meeting of the Junior class officers, Greg Cabrinha adds his opinions to the discussion.

With the officers going to Camp Varsity and the numerous car washes and bake sales over the summer, the Class of '83 didn't wait for September to start their work. Fall and winter were then taken up by the two Junior sponsored soc-hops and the selling of cider at the bonfire. The Juniors then surged ahead during spring. The Ring Breakfast and a talent show highlighted April, but the climax of the year came on May 8, with the Junior Prom. It was a very busy year.

Potential

Providing leadership and guidance for their classmates, the Class of '84 council and officers kept the administrative matters of the sophomores under control. Selected at the start of the year by the class sponsors, Mrs. Betty Ernst and Mrs. Joan Strokes, and the class officers, Joce Pena, Gary Singleton, Scott Calvert, and Jill Wilson, the twenty-three members of the class council helped plan the Homecoming float, the '84 dance-a-thon, and the class ice skating parties. The class council and officers had a very busy year keeping the sophomores happy.

Enjoying the company of a white mouse, Bobby Hertrig prepares his entry in the mouse race.

On The Rise

CLASS OF '85: Sponsor: Jackie Deckel, President: Shannon Souvenir, Vice-President: Melissa McNulty, Secretary: Janine Smith, Treasurer: Bonnie Cary.

The Class of '85 officers stand in front of one of the many spirit promoting murals in SS 3.

In September, the Class of '85 took a big step forward when they became the ninth freshman class to inhabit the school since it opened in 1974. This step toward adulthood was not easy to make but the Class of '85's sponsor, Mrs. Jackie Deckel, along with the freshman class officers, Shannon Souvenir, Melissa McNulty, Janine Smith, and Bonnie Cary, and the class council, who were chosen in the second quarter, gave the class a "boost" on their rise upward. The year started out well with the Homecoming float placing third in the float competition. The ninth graders were off to a good start with a small step upstairs but a giant leap into their future.

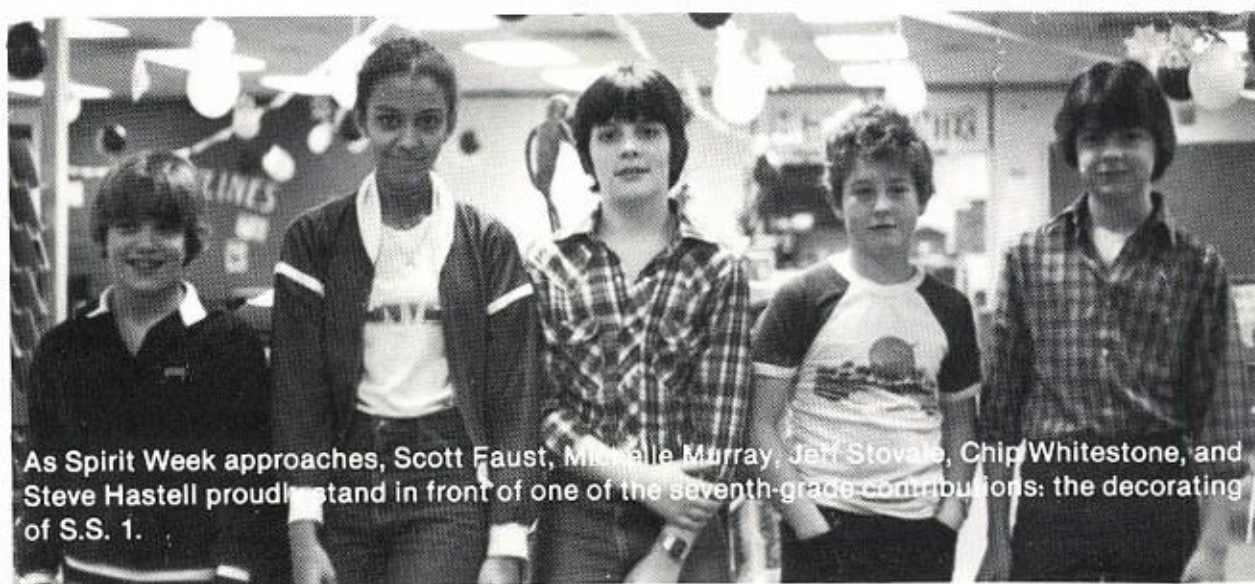

The '85 class council gathers before a meeting to discuss class night.

In The Beginning

CLASS OF '86: Sponsor: Karl Stutt, Pres.: Mark. Wayland, V. Pres: Karen Farlano, Sec.: Lynn Calvert, Treas.: Kim Curuthers, Historian: Anne Cirrilo.

CLASS OF '87: Sponsors: Pat Arthur, Kay Ellis, Steve Holley, Carole Hoover. Pres.: Scott Faust, V. Pres.: Michelle Murray, Treas.: Chip Whitestone, Recorder: Jeff Stovale, Historian: Stefan Hastell.

As Spirit Week approaches, Scott Faust, Michelle Murray, Jeff Stovale, Chip Whitestone, and Steve Hastell proudly stand in front of one of the seventh-grade contributions: the decorating of S.S. 1.

As he watches the progress of the fair, eighth-grade sponsor Mr. Stutt shows his pleasure with the results.

The start of another year marked one of great importance to the intermediate classes. For the class of '87, the birth of their secondary school careers was one of the most prominent events. Activities, including a visit to Gettysburg and a trip to Leewood Nursing Home, were a few ways this introduction was made easier. With the elder class, the attention was focused on in-school activities, culminating with the Braddock County Country Fair. The cooperation between the two classes, however, was how the first years at the school were really made memorable. This work lasted throughout the year, but reigned supreme during Homecoming, when the intermediates won the float contest. The start of secondary school was a significant time, and the classes of '86 and '87 bridged this threshold with exemplary spirit.

The leaders of the up and coming class of '86, Anne Cirillo, Karen Farlano, Kim Curuthers, Mark Wayland, and Lynn Calvert, rest after helping plan the intermediate dance.

Excellence

Performing "We've Only Just Begun," Cheryl Williams entertains at the NHS induction ceremony.

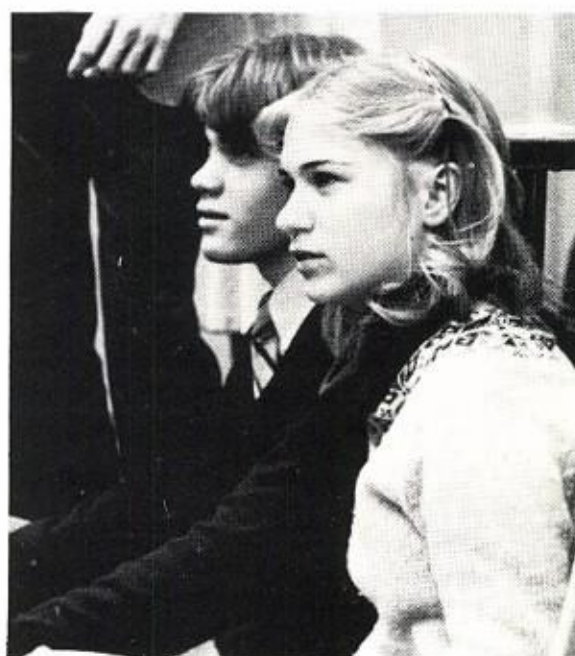

One of the highest honors conferred upon a student is induction into the National Honor Society. For those juniors and seniors selected, the requirements were not easy. Papers accounting their qualities of character, citizenship, leadership, and service had to be written, and the students were required to excel in academics. Even after admittance was achieved, these attributes were not discarded. The continued tutoring of English, history, math, and science was the most prominent outlet for these qualities. The hard work of these honor students also went into maintaining the necessary 3.5 academic average. The standards of excellence were once again upheld by the National Honor Society.

Old members as well as new members, attending their first meeting, listen as the subject of tutoring is discussed.

As the meeting progresses, the lecture of Mrs. Reynolds is not lost upon Jamie Winters.

Plans for part of the social side of the NHS, a trip to Leewood, are heard by new members Alan Bushnell and Ingrid Friedt.

Dedication

In its ninth year of existence, it was evident why the Key Club was one of the premier service clubs. The Lake Braddock Key Club, being a member of an international organization of Key Clubs, and their sponsor, the Kiwanis Club, was kept busy with official club business throughout the year, however, service to the local area remained uppermost. Some highlights of this service were the project aiding the Potomac Lung Association in the winter, and a fund raising bike-a-thon during the spring. The continued handling of traffic during major events at school provided further opportunity for the Keys to work. A chance at this service was open to any person who completed an application, and was recommended by a teacher. For those who were members, though, the year was filled with the spirit which is a tradition of the Key Club.

Service: the concept behind the Keyettes. To the community, the Keyettes dedicated a large portion of this service. Groups such as the American Lung Association and the American Red Cross benefited from support these forty girls provided. More of this civic assistance was shown by the Thanksgiving food drive. Closer to us, the students and the faculty also received their help. As part of this help, the traditional decoration of the Sadie Hawkins dance and management of the concession stand were undertaken by the Keyettes. Once again, the Keyettes demonstrated their extraordinary ability to serve.

The spirit of the Keyettes is shown as they assemble for a meeting.

Etiquette

If there was a major event at school, one could be sure the Host and Hostess Club was working it. The Host and Hostess Club was formed with just that purpose in mind: to host and assist with school or community activities. Just as a host would assist his guests, this club ushered at such events as graduation, Baccalaureate, and the numerous sport championships that were held here. In addition, the Host and Hostess Club provided needed help on back-to-school night. The etiquette of a host was a quality this club focused on. Members were required to have at least average grades, along with an application and recommendations by at least two teachers. The Host and Hostess Club once again demonstrated to us how to be a good host.

Plans to aid the SGA with their beautification project are reviewed by Cathy McGrail and Dawn Todd.

When the first bell rang in September, it started another year of dependable service from Tri-Hi-Y. The hard work this girls' service club performed was spread throughout the academic year, but it began with the football season when the girls cleaned the bleachers after the home games. The pace then quickened with their assistance to the SGA's beautification projects and the volunteer work for various departments. Other services included sponsoring a destitute child and assisting an American Lung Association fund raising campaign. At the same time, the year was being balanced by more and more social activities. A ski trip with other county Tri-Hi-Y's in January and a Christmas dinner were some highlights of the winter. During the spring, the local clubs were once again united in a camping session. One of the biggest of the social events, however, was a surprise money earning show staged during the year. It was another year of resolute work and enjoyable activities for Tri-Hi-Y.

Deliberating over the proposed schedule are Carol Schoelen, Sarah Adams, and Jeanne Simmons.

Every two weeks, or twenty-two times a year, Dr. Pat McCarthy's Journalism students produced another edition of the award winning "Bear Facts," the Lake Braddock student newspaper. Under the guidance of Co-editors Tammy Page and Gary Freedman, the "Bear Facts" served a variety of purposes in the school. The newspaper was an outlet for student feeling in its Letters to the Editor, a source of information in its news articles, a form of entertainment in its feature articles and cartoons, and consumer information in its advertisements. "The Bear Facts" fulfilled many of the school's communication needs.

Preparing for a speech at the Seven Springs seminar, editors Karen Levin and Janet Pelzel compile plans for the '82 Lair.

Photographer Dean Surette leafs through an old yearbook looking for ideas.

Who really put together your yearbook? Who compiled all of these words and pictures into a 368 page extravaganza of timeless literature? The answer could be found in the foreign language area in room C-207. From sixth period until well into the evening, the yearbook staff labored in writing and re-writing, designing, cutting and waxing to perfection one of the largest volumes in the county. Prospective yearbook members were nominated by their English teachers of the previous year and took a test to get accepted to the staff by the sponsors, Mrs. Dodie Hruby and Ms. Sandy Murray. During the summer of 1981, the two co-editors, Karen Levin and Janet Pelzel, ventured into the wilds of Pennsylvania and returned triumphantly with a second place trophy for the '82 "Lair" yearbook designs. The sounds of yearbook making were many and varied: "Get off my disk!"... "Is this a good headline?"... "Will you be printing today?"... "Whew, I finally finished." In spite of varying degrees of experience and slight confusion, another great edition of "The Lair" emerged.

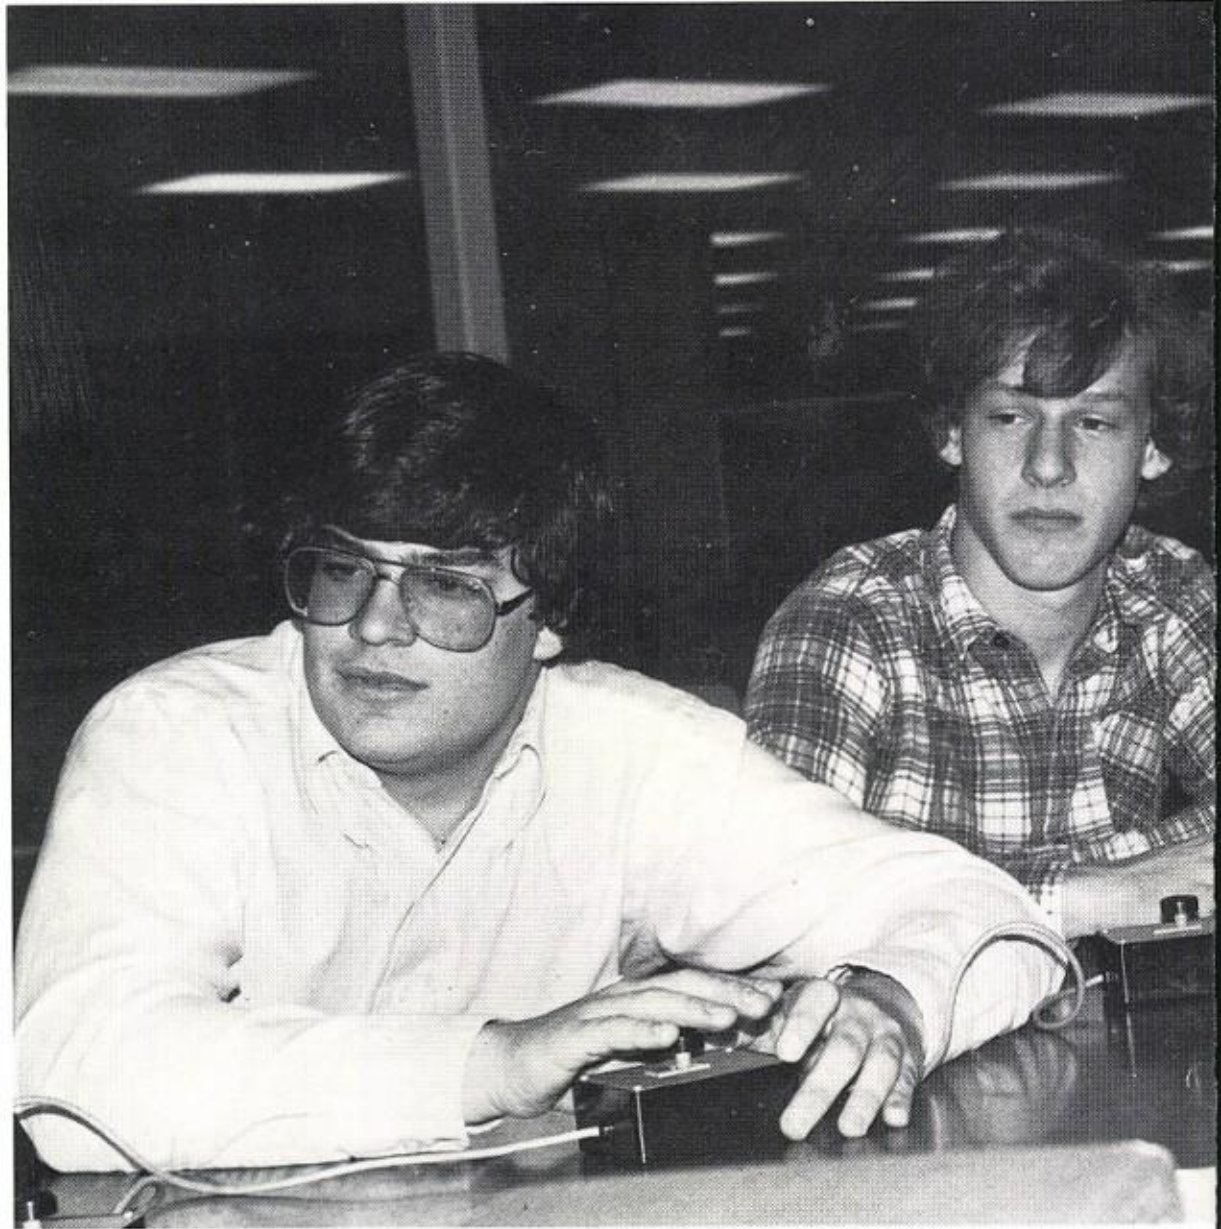

Prior to late-night deadlines, the "Lair" staff has time to pose for a group shot.

Cream of the Crop

T.V. stars of the school had to be the It's Academic Team. The three students who appeared on WRC-TV's award-winning "It's Academic" were Lake Braddock's cream of the crop. The members and their alternates met every Monday to practice answering questions on various academic subjects. This year was extra special for one member of the team, Steve Rhinehart. Steve was the youngest member on the It's Academic team in Lake Braddock's history. He was a tenth grader. For the entire team and the sponsor, Mrs. Bernie Glaze, it was a rich and rewarding season of competition.

If you were to ask who was the best qualified to read and interpret poetry and other literature and give spur-of-the-moment speeches, the answer would probably be the seven members of the Forensics Team. This talented group of students attended many tournaments within the region flaunting their command of the language in such areas as dramatic interpretation, original oratory, and extemporaneous speaking. Both sponsor Jane Powell and the members of this Forensics Team put in long hours of work, but at the end of the year, upon looking back, it was obviously worth it all.

Liberté Égalité Fraternité

For those students who enjoy French culture and the French language, there was the French club. And for those who excel in their work and are in at least their second year of French, the French Honor Society existed. Dining on haute cuisine at Gallic restaurants and with the other foreign language clubs at the progressive dinner was one of the ways spice was added to the year by these organizations. Additional excitement was supplied by the viewing of French films. This excursion into French life was rounded out by singing native songs. Quite a year!

S.H.S. president Beth Dernbach begins the discussion on the induction ceremony for new members.

Such diverse activities as visiting the Organization of American States Building and planning parties exemplified the Spanish Club and Spanish Honor Society. The club offered any student taking Spanish, including intermediates, for a first time in its history, a chance to meet new people and participate in other cultural events, such as a visit to a Spanish market and the showing of native films. The Spanish Honor Society allowed any outstanding Spanish students to experience Hispanic culture by listening to guest speakers and dining at the progressive dinner. A greater accomplishment, however, was the advent of a closer unity between the two organizations.

If German culture was needed, one could look to the German Club and Honor Society to provide it. The members recreated and enacted this culture at various Oktoberfests and at practices of Teutonic dances. Tutoring by the honor society helped with the study of the language and the culture. The meeting with other German clubs at the state German convention, during the spring, was a further way this language was studied. Other activities included local parties hosted by various members, and dining at ethnic restaurants. With all of these events, it was easy to see how the German Club and Honor Society transplanted Germanic culture into the school.

Antiqui

The arrival of new members diverts the attention of Sara Trexler and Kathy King from the study of a book.

Antiqui, or, in English, classic, was a word that described Latin, the language, and, equally as well, the kind of year the Latin Club and the Latin Honor Society had. Competition in Latin was the biggest part of this classic year. The meet, sponsored by the Virginia Junior Classical League early in the year, provided competition where the club showed its talent. The various certamina, or Latin contests, and the Latin Bowl were other examples of this competition. But, the crowning achievement of the year was the actual hosting of one of these Latin contests in the spring. A good year cannot be all work though, so the club and the honor society made t-shirts advertising Latin and ended the year with their traditional picnic. It was an outstanding year for the Latin Club and the Latin Honor Society.

An interesting detail of the Latin 2 workbook is pointed out to Nathan Norris by Mike McFarlane.

Spirited students

One group could always be counted on to provide school spirit at home and away at school sports activities: the Pep Club. They could be seen at football games in the fall, basketball games in the winter, and many spring activities, also. The Pep Club was divided into sections which alternated appearances at games. It was made up of students who showed an interest in school spirit and sports activities, and who often led the chanting of school cheers that inspired the Bruin teams to victorious seasons.

Retreat

Laughing at an inside joke, Laurel Heneghan, Lee Ocker and Lynn Herrington remember the three day Ocean City trip.

Some people wanted to study about God and the Bible; some were interested in the monthly guest speakers; and many more came to just have fun. But whatever their reason, Young Life was the place to go. Sponsors Kiki Galivan, along with Pat and Betsy Goodman, led the fellowship and discussions, and counseled privately with anyone who wanted to talk about personal problems. Young Life was open to all who wanted to come to its meetings and weekend camp-outs, called retreats. Anyone in grade nine through twelve was welcome, so there was always a large attendance at retreats and the weekly Bible studies at someone's house. Whether a person came for the study, the counseling, or the fun, Young Life was the place.

A special group of math scholars used their after-school time to improve their already proficient math skills by forming the Math Club. The best of these "math whizzes" were inducted into the prestigious Math Honor Society. In addition to coaching each other and receiving instruction from their sponsor, Ms. Pat Gabriel, the members of the club polished their skills by taking quizzes after school and by competing in "mail-in" math competitions with other area schools. When the members of the Math Club looked back at the end of the year, they saw that the practice, competition, and more practice all added up to an educational and rewarding year.

Tired and overworked, FGSS members unwind after a particularly difficult day.

One of the most unique clubs in Lake Braddock was made up of seniors who had "taken a very liberal approach to their senior year." This club, called the Former Good Student Society, or FGSS, was comprised of students whose grade point average had declined during their last year in high school, but who deserved a break after three years of hard work. In addition to the "normal" officers of a club, the FGSS distinguished itself with its variety of out-of-the-ordinary offices and their self-appointed incumbents. Some of these offices were "Minister of Pigmentation Alteration" (Jon Burks), "Head of Narcoleptic Classroom Monitors" (Tamara Page) and "Kegmaster" (Clay Riley). The purpose of this club, to let the seniors enjoy their final year of school, was easily met.

Long Term Investment

Awaiting the start of the Friday morning meeting is Tony Agnelli.

Preparation is the key to success, and at school, the Future Business Leaders of America were working toward success. For these members, this preparation meant learning the skills of business management. But knowledge alone did not represent their total work; application of it completed the training for these lacocca's-to-be. The business competition in May was the biggest demonstration of this corporate talent. Additionally, work on the magazine and food drives contributed to both the future success of the members and the immediate benefit of the school. This work done by the FBLA was a wise investment as they prepared for their future careers.

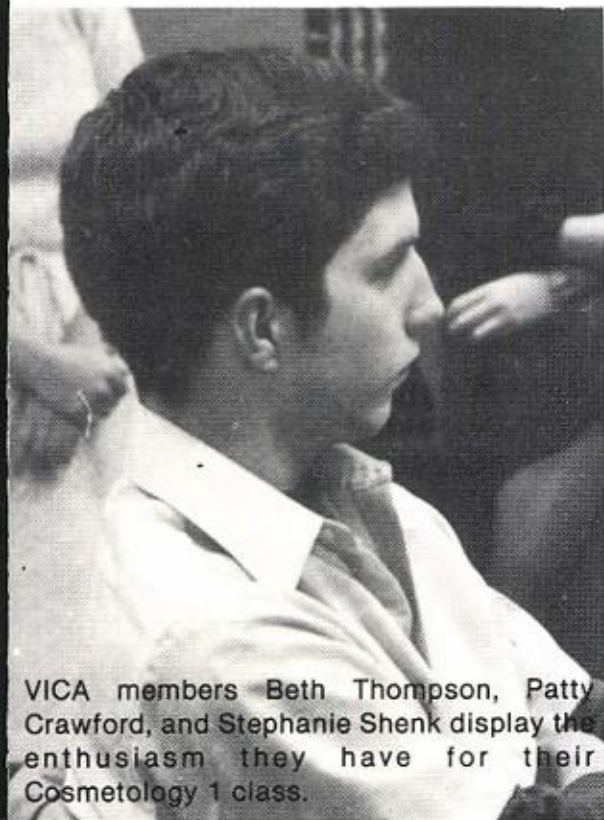

The call to order elicits a response from Scott Mewhinney as Tracey Ray looks on.

After school came adult life, and with that came the need for a job. That is where the Vocational and Industrial Clubs of America plus the Cooperative Education Association fit in. With VICA, the emphasis was on the vocational and the industrial. Students were trained and prepared for occupations in different fields, notably cosmetology and auto mechanics. When their time wasn't spent building up to their careers, the members raised money to visit the International Hair Styling Show in New York. For those who preferred a white collar, though, COE was the place to be. Here, the goal was to assist the student into becoming a competent business employee. Work toward this objective in budgeting time, organizing projects, and cooperating at work was stressed. The time spent after school and after work was filled by these students with work on the magazine drive and an Employer-Employee Appreciation Luncheon. Looking into the future was the main interest of the members of VICA and COE.

Knowledge for the Future

sounds like something Mrs. Hearrell would say

In times when food was always an expensive and sometimes a scarce commodity, modern homemakers needed to know how to do more than just cook. They also needed to know about economics, consumer information, and nutrition. This knowledge could be gained in school in two major ways: through the FHA (Future Homemakers of America) which met after school, and through H.E.R.O. (Home Economics Related Occupations), which was a two-period class. Through these organizations, the students learned not only about food, its wise purchase and preparation, but also about specialized care for young children and the elderly. The effects of this education may not have been felt at the time but will certainly be felt in the future.

FHA members unite in support of the modern homemaker.

Classics

During a Thursday afternoon meeting, Editor Leslie Brown reads over one of the submitted short stories.

Few people knew who published Chimera, The Lake Braddock literary magazine that was distributed to the entire student body after the Spring break. It came as a surprise that Ms. Gray and sixteen students devoted their afterschool time once or twice a week to review and edit contributions of stories, poems, and artwork from students in grades seven through twelve. The Chimera staff received their funds from the county and the SGA which they used to mail the magazine free of charge, instead of selling it as they had in the past. As editor Leslie Brown stated, "Writing these stories is a good thing for the students to do." The writings of these students helped make the community more aware of the students' opinions, and Chimera turned these contributions into classics in the annals of LBSS literary history.

Photogenic

Because of the many school activities, the Photography Club had a very busy year. The purpose of this club, as stated by President Dean Surette, was to "improve photography skills all around." Members of the club were photographers from The Lair, and The Bear Facts, free-lance photographers, and plain photography enthusiasts. Experienced photographers taught techniques such as developing film and flash photography procedures. The Photography Club opened a studio where students could come with friends and have their pictures taken. The club charged 75 cents for five-by-sevens and up to two dollars for eight-by-tens. Part of these funds went towards new equipment as well as photography conventions in Washington. The club attended conventions at the Smithsonian in October and the D.C. Armory in December. The training received by the photographers quickly showed in the quality of their work and was a boon to the various publications to which they contributed.

Colors

Once a week, Intermediate girls could be seen wearing purple and gold uniforms over white blouses. These spirited uniforms signified that the girl wearing these colors belonged to either the seventh or eighth grade drill team. To have the honor of being on the team, the applicant tried out in front of a panel of judges and was rated on poise, timing and grace. The seventh and eighth graders who were accepted wore their uniforms proudly while they both practiced and cheered at pep rallies and sporting events for their school, their class, and, of course, their colors.

Head Start

Gymnast Sheri Gerardo practices her routine on the balance beam.

Because the gymnastics team is only open to high schoolers, girls in the seventh and eighth grades who wished to participate in competitive gymnastics had to wait one or two years. To remedy this problem, the Intermediate Gymnastics Team was founded by Mrs. Linda Holman, who let these interested girls come together and form a team of exhibition gymnasts preparing for their chance at high school competition. These girls practiced their skills in tumbling, balance beam, and other demanding gymnastic routines and performed for large audiences, always to a warm reception. This preliminary training gave the girls a head start on the high school ranks.

From 'Afrikakorps' to Dune, any student with an imaginative and creative mind could have found enjoyment in the Conflict Simulations Club or the Science Fiction Club. Conquest and victory were the key words for the wargaming enthusiasts of the Conflict Simulations Club. This club met every week to promote the playing of wargames and to introduce new players to this hobby. But, the members' zeal for the games was too strong for just these weekly encounters, so a tournament was held in the spring for all interested. If a less active, but equally imaginative, role was desired, the search ended with the Science Fiction Club. As with their strategy-minded counterpoints, the members of this club sought to acquaint more people with their interest and to further the field of science fiction. Among other events, the club held their annual science fiction writing contest to encourage new fans and authors. If other worlds and other times were to be conquered, or merely contemplated, one needed only to join the Conflict Simulations Club or the Science Fiction Club.

Meeting political leaders. Learning about the government. These were the marks of a Young Republican. As their name implies, these people were students who were interested in the Republican view and who desired to learn the workings of the government. Taking advantage of our location, the calendar of the members included talking with Virginia's congressmen and meeting the President. Changing the focus to within the Old Dominion, the Young Republicans traveled to Richmond with Delegate Jim Dillard during the year. Even staying closer to home, these members managed to fulfill their purpose by inviting some well known political speakers to lecture. If all these political and governmental activities sounded interesting, then membership in the Young Republicans was all that it took.

Extra Special

The National Safety Council had an important purpose in mind when it was organized years ago and that purpose continued to be honored in the 1981-82 school year. The Safety Council's message of "Safety First" was relayed to both the student body and faculty through verbal communication, handmade pictures of injured teddy bears, and professional Red Cross safety posters throughout the school. The Council was also instrumental in recruiting donors to the Red Cross blood bank. The Safety Council, and their sponsor Mrs. Hilda Hall, attended county meetings of the National Safety Council once a month to find out about new trends in safety education. At the end of the year, the Safety Council could be sure that the student body had benefited from their care.

Junior Civitan was a service club made up of high school students who cared about the welfare of the handicapped. This year they devoted their time to raising funds in order to aid the mentally retarded. During the holiday season, the Junior Civitans, in connection with their Senior counterparts, sold fruit cakes and donated the profits to the Northern Virginia Training Center. They also wrapped presents that were exchanged at the Center's annual Christmas party. In addition, the Civitans held bake sales and car washes to raise even more money for the benefit of the retarded. However, not all of the Civitan's projects were fundraisers. Members of the club participated and acted as "Huggers" at the Special Olympics. In their own right, these energetic students were special, themselves.

Discoverers

Science Club member Jim Lampton looks on as Mark Beebe experiments with different chemicals.

Joseph Krutch said "Science represents the world as Man gradually comes to discover it." The Science Club, Lake Braddock's organization of prospective explorers, was busy discovering the world while increasing their knowledge about it. The members of the Science Club used their background in physics, chemistry, and biology to explore organisms and chemicals as well as the stars and the universe. Seniors Mark Beebe and Phil Plait gave frequent lectures on the interesting features of the earth and universe. In February, club president Mike Thomas held discussions and demonstrations of computers open to the entire school. The members of the science club were explorers beginning their long quest for new discoveries.

New Horizons

Tired of the standard fare in reading at school? Looking for different insights into life? If the answer to either, or both, of these questions was 'yes,' then Psyche magazine was the solution. A new phenomenon in its first year of publication, Psyche magazine was an alternative literary journal. The articles and selections featured philosophy, free writing, poetry, and cartoons. Each issue, which came out every other week, dealt with one aspect of modern society and behavior, with such examples as religion, conformity, and decadence. So, if one wanted fresh opinions on subjects affecting us all, Psyche magazine was the forum to be looked at.

If simply facing a new year and its new teachers, but with old friends, seemed challenging, then the experiences of new students would have appeared overwhelming. Entering a student body of 3,972 members was a formidable task, but this dilemma also proved to be a boon, as the Newcomers' Club was tailored for these students. As members of this club, they eased their entrance into this school with visits to D.C. and to skating rinks. When their initiation in the fall had passed, the emphasis moved ahead to the next year. Plans were made during the second semester to meet still more new students expected the following September. Even while arranging these events, the members of the Newcomers' Club got to know more friends and more about the school, keeping true to their purpose.

Walking through the Music, Drama, and Art departments, proved to be an audio-visual experience. After many long hours of practice, the music department played for us during assemblies, pep rallies, sporting events, and many other activities. The drama department performed their plays, musical productions, and skits. The art department displayed their unique works of art throughout the school. The sights and sounds of our audio-visual departments brought color and excitement to every corner of our school.

Performing their show for the judges, the Marching Band works intently at the Mount Vernon competition.

"Right, Left, Right...Double Time!"

These commands were very familiar to the 108 members of the Marching Band. According to director Carl Bly, "When people are in a program, the talent accumulates over the years. We've hit a peak." And peak they did! They captured six first place awards, out scored all other Fairfax County and Virginia Bands in all Marching Band Festivals attended during the first half of the year, were named Grand Champion at the Mt. Vernon Invitational Classic, and competed in championship, open, and AAA classes. Under the student direction of Margo Snyder and Tracey Thomas, the band went far. The Color Guard was excellent under the direction of co-captains Jackie Leshko and Kim Miller. "Seniors definitely added a lot to the show, too," said Mr. Bly. All this talent was brought together in early August with practices from 8 AM to 4 PM, five days a week. Band camp came at the end of August, and then practice began everyday after school. After performing the halftime show for Friday night football games, members of the band would wake up early Saturday morning and head for a competition. Said flutist Wendy Adams, "Everyone TRIED to do homework on the bus, but not much of it got done. The whole band is like a family. The trips were tiring, but fun. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Throughout the year, the Symphonic Band directed by Carl Bly, provided listening pleasure to all who heard their music. This year, they gave many fine performances. Among them were the Christmas Concert on December 10, a Pre-Festival Concert on March 2, and the Spring Concert on May 20th. The band also went to the District Festival at Annandale High School on March 6. This was a year of accomplishment for all of the Symphonic Band members, proving that hard work and practice pays off.

During Mr. Bly's fifth period, the Jazz Ensemble took the stage. The group consisted of talented students who played many different instruments, ranging from trombones to drums. A high interest level was a big part of the group. Members usually participated in other bands as well as the Jazz Ensemble. The nineteen members played various pieces such as "Dark Orchid," "Journey to Capricorn," "Hootin' with Newton," and "Decoupage." They practiced for winter and spring concerts and many other shows throughout the year. Because of each individual's interest in music, quality performances were produced every time.

Concert Band I was used as basic training in preparing students for Concert Band II. The band was geared for the individual, so outstanding musicians could move themselves up to a higher band. Concert Band I students concentrated on improving their skills and techniques and in the first nine weeks of school, four students moved up to Concert Band II. At the end of the first semester, Concert Band I was dissolved and all former members were integrated into Concert Band II. Students in this larger group played the music of the season, songs from movies and Broadway musicals, like "They're Playing Our Song," along with a large variety of classical music. Concert performances included the Christmas Concert on December 10, the Festival Concert and the Rock-a-thon in March, and the Spring Concert. Concert Band II did a lot to spread the joy of music throughout the school.

Celest Herbert and Susan Kingsbury enjoy playing "Frosty The Snowman"

As people began to fill the auditorium, a sense of excitement filled the air. The musicians had taken their seats and were ready to play. They began their program with "Frosty the Snowman," which soon led to "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer." The Concert Orchestra was made up of seventh, eighth and ninth grade string players, all trying to perfect their art. Some of these fine performers went on to regionals and received high honors, but to achieve these goals, much practice and dedication was required. This dedication was clearly shown in the students' concerts held all through the year up until June 3rd, their final recital. At their last performance, their abilities were shown to their fullest extent as proud parents and friends looked on. Everyone enjoyed being in Concert Orchestra and their performance certainly showed it.

A quality tone is heard as Symphonic Orchestra students rehearse Beethoven's 5th Symphony.

While walking through the Music Department during 3rd period, sounds of students tuning up their instruments could be heard. During class time, the Symphonic Orchestra members practiced such songs as Beethoven's 5th Symphony and selections from the Nutcracker Suite. These were to be played at their winter and end-of-school concerts. Other performances were held at elementary schools, civic associations, and art shows. For those players who strived for higher goals, regional and all-state tournaments were held. These individuals were rated as 1 (superior), 2 (excellent), 3 (good), 4 (fair), and 5 (bad). Talent, practice, and a great deal of pride contributed to making our Symphony of Strings a great musical group.

During the year, the Wind Ensemble worked very hard preparing themselves for upcoming activities, including their many performances and competitions. Their first concert was the Elementary concert, then the Winter Concert on December 15, the Festival Concert on March 9, and the Spring Concert on May 18. One of the special attractions that the band participated in was the Spring Competition. This event included 15 bands from different areas in Virginia to compete against each other. In addition to the above, the members of the Wind Ensemble spent many hours raising money to support their many activities. In sound and in spirit, the Wind Ensemble was right on key.

Throughout the year, the Guitar Ensemble played their songs and ballads for us. They also performed at the Christmas Concert on December 17 and at the Spring Concert on May 27. They also played at several elementary schools, such as Ravensworth and Whiteoaks. Wherever the Guitar Ensemble went, they played rock, folk, classical, country, or just the music of the season. They also participated in the music department's fund raisers by selling cheese packages and candy. Overall, the Guitar Ensemble was really tuned in to the year's activities.

Talent, an important aspect of an performer, was found throughout the music department this year, especially in Beginning Orchestra. Though Beginning Orchestra had only just started playing on the secondary level, it was combined with Concert Orchestra because Beginning Orchestra was such a small group. Percussion had no time for a concert this year, but they practiced just as hard as if a concert would be held. The better than average players of Percussion were chosen for Select Band and attended additional practice after school. Separate classes were held for Woodwind students according to their level, with Mr. Bly, Mr. LaCava, and Mrs. Shaw. Songs varied, depending upon the teacher. Though Beginning Orchestra, Woodwind, and Percussion differed in many ways, they all had one thing in common: talent.

When Schubert's Mass in G is performed correctly, the sound is beautiful to the ear. The members of the Symphonic Chorale practiced this piece for two months. They performed it at Holy Spirit Church, Harper's Ferry, the Mormon Temple in Maryland, and many other places. Everywhere they performed, respect and standing ovations were left in their wake. Soprano Sarah Trezona was surprised to get her solo, as were tenor Mark Weaver and bass Jeff Fletcher. A Christmas show livened up December. The variety type presentation, "T'was the Show Before Christmas," was fun for all the participants and the audience. The Chorale's year was jam packed, but they somehow found time to include a trip to Florida in April. The intermediates also had their share of the talent. The younger version of the Symphonic Chorale was the Intermediate Chorale. For their Christmas show on December 17th, they presented a medley of traditional Christmas songs. The Intermediate Chorale also performed "Stars that Twinkle and Shine" and "Holiday Wishes" at the show for the 7th grade on December 18th. Many of these intermediate singers showed great promise of becoming part of the Symphonic Chorale in the years to come.

"Tightest, closest knit group," said Jeff Fletcher about this year's Swing Singers. Performing at a variety of places including the Pentagon, the Connecticut Connection in D.C., plus the Army-Navy and Springfield Country Clubs, this group had to be close and tightly knit. Becoming a Swing Singer began with an audition the previous April. If accepted, you were required to have second period free, to participate in all shows, and to maintain a "C" average. The group got involved in school by helping to make a holiday tape with the journalism department for the Christmas issue of the "Bear Facts." After having established great prestige, the Swing Singers had possibilities of singing engagements at the White House and Disneyworld open to them. Ms. Olga Morales, one of their choreographers, also directed the Intermediate Swing, which was made up of 8th and 9th graders. Their performances included a Christmas show on December 17, plus presentations at pep-rallies and area elementary schools. The students in Intermediate Swing received excellent training that would help them in the future to become better Swing Singers.

Throughout the year, students in Miss Slosky's Guitar I and II classes found it to be a rewarding experience. Students played a variety of songs, from pop to classical. Miss Slosky brought in talented guests to instruct special workshops for the class. During each quarter, students were asked to do a special project. For several weeks, the students picked and practiced their music, and at last presented it to the class. Most of the students joined to learn to play, read music, play chords, or just to become more proficient on the guitar. At the end of the school year, guitar students felt a sense of fulfillment as they recalled the year's activities and accomplishments.

Jazz-Rock Guitar was introduced this year by the Music Department to provide further instructional opportunities for advanced guitarists. In order to take the class, you had to have passed Guitar I or an audition. At the end of every quarter, the class was asked to do a special project. The students either chose a favorite song or used an original composition to perform in front of the class. Teachers from colleges, other high schools, or from private institutions were brought in to instruct special workshops for the class of twelve. During the year, the classes' main goal was to buy a set of drums for the class. Throughout the year Jazz-Rock Guitar used their talent to show that this new class was tops.

Under the direction of Mrs. Morales, the Concert Choir and the Women's Ensemble sang tunes that lifted the spirit of all who heard their voices. The Concert Choir was open for interested students in grades 8 and 9, while auditions for the Women's Ensemble were held in the spring. Both groups practiced diligently for the Christmas Show which was held on December 17 in the Little Theater. They sang traditional Christmas songs, selected solos, and specialty numbers. They also practiced for other performances throughout the year. The Women's Ensemble went to the District Festival in March and the Concert Choir participated in the all-county and all-regional chorus. The singing voices of the Concert Choir produced melodies chiming with harmony.

Practices were held after school to prepare for upcoming concerts. The December 15 Christmas Con-cert featured such festive songs as "Little Drummer Boy," and "Sleighride Express." An end-of-school concert was also featured. Being a Select Band member was a great privilege, an honor that would make anyone proud.

A MUSICAL INTRODUCTION

Vickie Sadler and Dwight Pattison concentrate on their music.

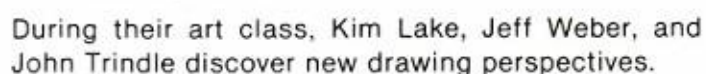

For Matt Bonner, Folk Instruments is a class to relax and develop a favorite hobby.

Introduction was a key word in Folk Instruments and Introduction to Band class. Both classes consisted of 7th and 8th graders, most with no previous experience in the musical arts. Intro. Band, taught by Mr. LaCava, was basically not a performing group since these students were beginners, but the same instruments as in regular band were played. The novice musicians learned songs from the book, "First Division Band Method," as they played different songs from week to week. Folk Instruments was taught by Mrs. Slosky. Students in her class needed no previous training. They began from step one learning to read music and chord symbols. The recorder and guitar were two instruments taught. Introduction to Band and Folk Instruments were very important steps in training intermediates, for they would soon be among Lake Braddock's great performers.

Not only were L.B. students academically, athletically, and musically talented, but they excelled artistically as well. In-school art entailed a wide range of crafts and mediums easily seen around the building. Beautiful murals, signs done in calligraphy, and various showcase displays boasted of artistic excellence. Art was also incorporated in academics. Some teachers assigned collages, drawings, and other visual aides to be done along with reports. Photography students helped to decorate subschool offices by displaying their achievements in advanced photo technology. Many students made their own jewelry, decorated their homes with clay or paper mache sculptures, and created practical items such as vases, mugs, and ashtrays in pottery classes. Looking around our school, it was easy to see that many Bruins would go far in the world of art.

Stage manager Sonja Diffenbacher listens to the actors for mistakes.

Mousetrap was the second production of the year, running from November 18-21. The production had a strong cast including Charlie Trew as Giles Ralston; Joe Gill as Sgt. Mousetrap, written by the late Agatha Christie, has the longest record of consecutive performances of any play in the world. Pat Jones, the director, was very pleased to be doing the play and felt excited about the people performing it. "Excellent, just excellent," he commented. Joe Cirilo, a Senior who saw Mousetrap on opening night remarked, "I was shocked. The ending surprised me. I never suspected it."

Behind the Scenes

Mr. Jones teaches the construction crew how to build a door.

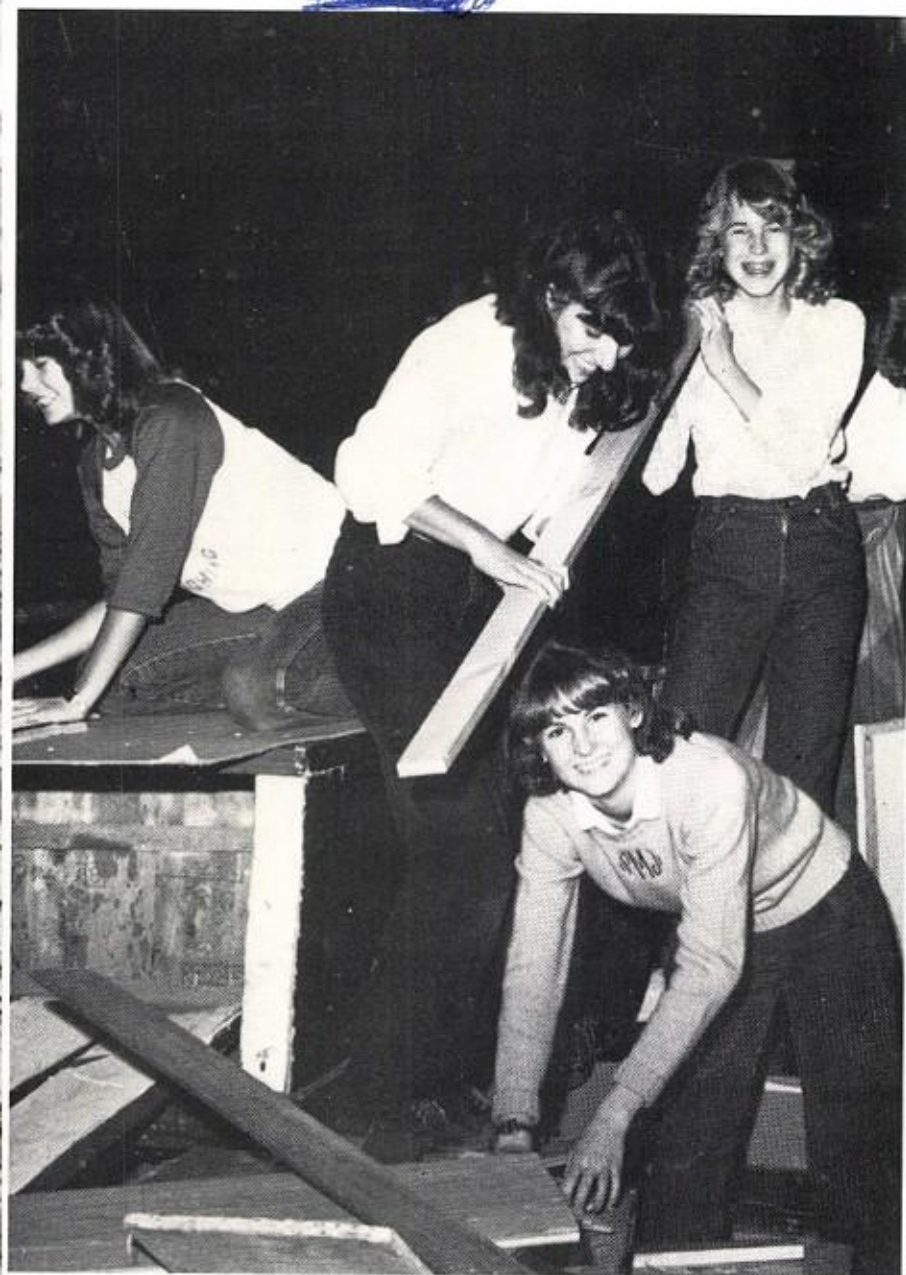

Getting ready for a performance was not easy. Many dedicated and devoted students stayed after school for many long hours every-day working to make each production a success. Scenery had to be made and painted by the props crew, construction crew, and the stage carpenter. The costume crew had to distribute costumes to actors and actresses, while makeup crew applied makeup and monitored hairstyles. Finally, the lights and sound personnel had to regulate cue lights and make sure microphones worked properly. Although behind-the-scenes work took away a lot of after school free time, most students found it an honor and privilege to be a part of these immense productions.

Theatrical

Becky Enquist listens as Mr. Rumberger explains what is on the agenda for class.

Though this year's high school drama productions were excellent, most people forgot where basic training of high school performers came from. It started at the intermediate level. Seventh graders were taught "Creative Dramatics." In this class, the absolute basics in movement, speech, and acting were learned. Students were encouraged to overcome fear of acting on stage in front of an audience. Eighth graders participated in "An Introduction to Theater." Skills taught in eighth grade theater were acting and operating the sound system. Time also was set aside for technical instruction. With what they learned in class, students were encouraged to tryout for parts in intermediate productions, though trying out wasn't required. From the results of the intermediate drama productions, it seemed our future theater students would be an A-1 cast.

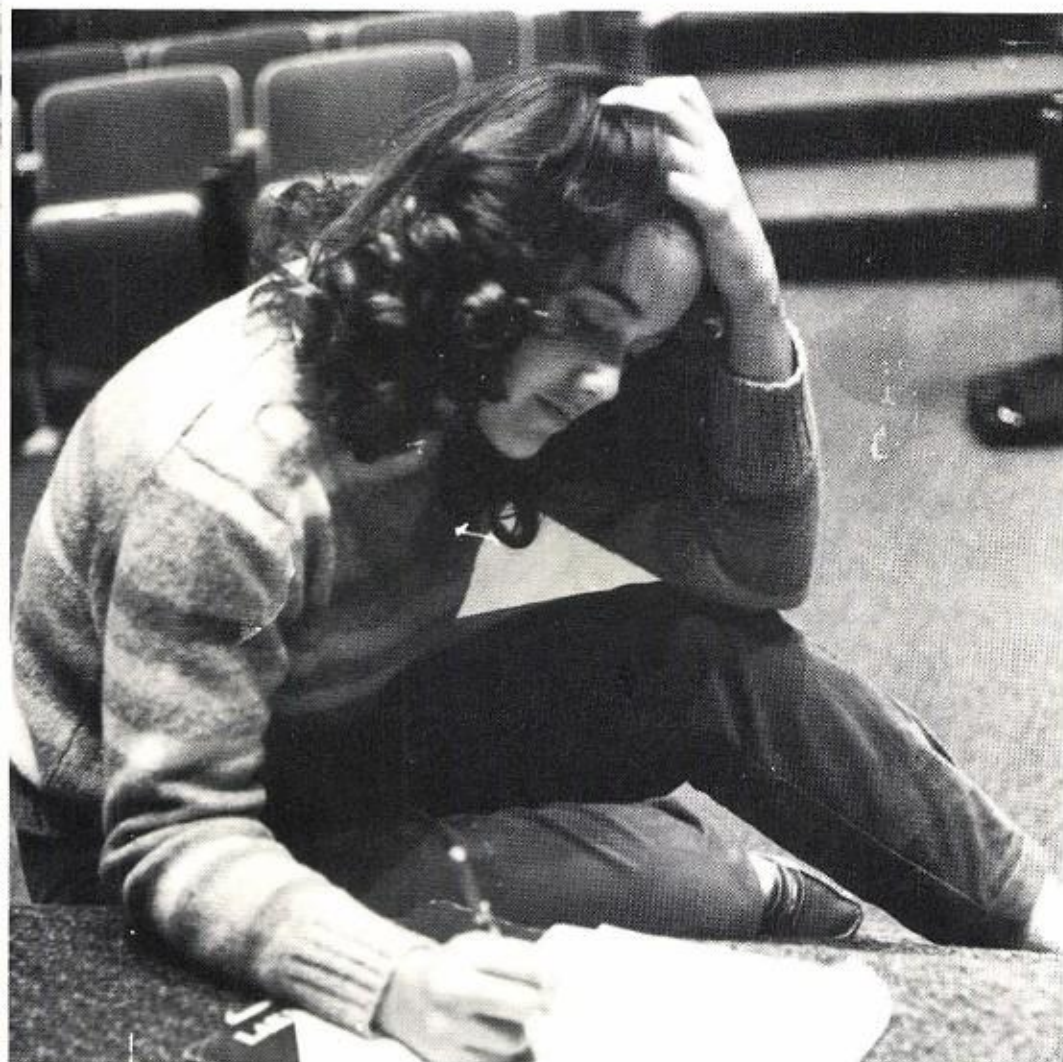

Andrew Ferrantine and Steve Landsbury go over notes for a play they have written for class.

Output

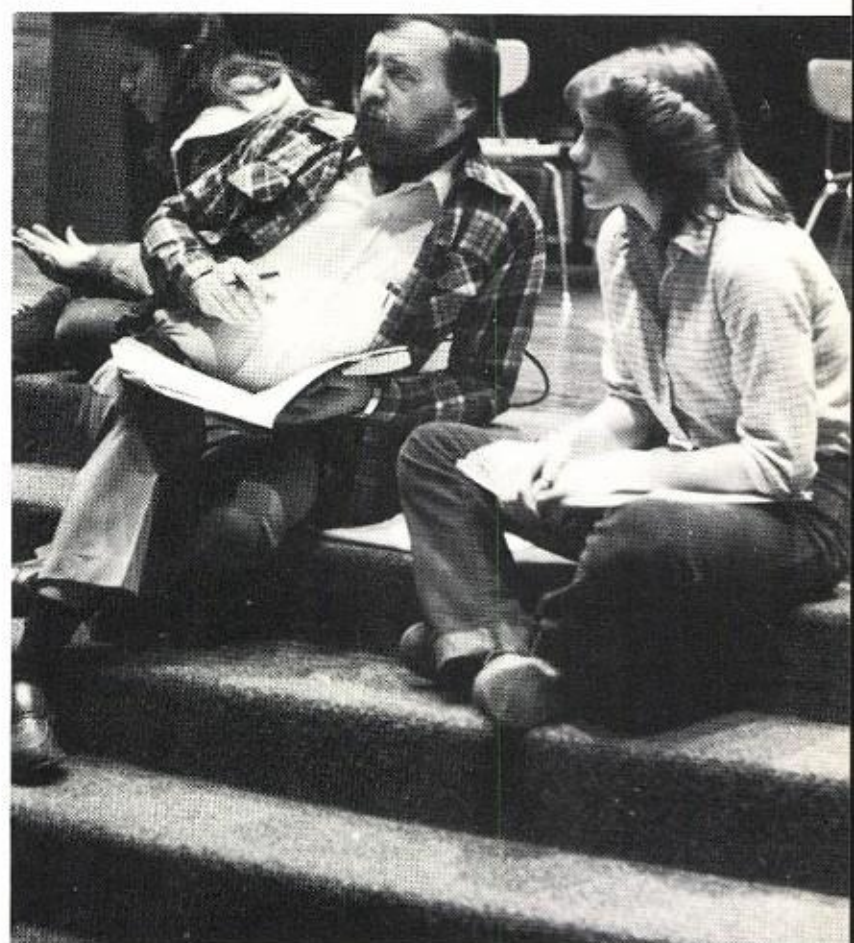

Charlie Trew checks the lighting for the play "Deadwood Dick."

Lake Braddock's theatrical output had always been good, but this year it was especially entertaining. Anyone could try out for school plays, but almost always the ones who received parts were drama students. High school students who took drama were divided into four different levels. Ninth graders were in Drama I, learning acting techniques, production design, and play writing. Drama II consisted of tenth graders who learned to improve their acting and directing skills. Eleventh graders were in Drama III, and twelfth graders were in Drama IV, but these two were combined into one class. This class concentrated mainly on actual theater productions, such as the "Mousetrap," "Deadwood Dick," the Variety Show, and the one act play festival. A separate class was taught strictly about Stage Craft during first period along with lighting and other technical skills necessary for drama production. This year our theatrical output was excellent thanks to the dedication and talent of our drama students.

The spotlight shone on the drama department when their production of "Deadwood Dick" was performed from February 17 through 20. This Senior directed play was one of the funniest ever produced by our drama department. Audience participation played a big part in the show, as the crowd cheered the hero and hissed at the villain. "Deadwood Dick" was a Western melodrama set in the 1890's in a saloon in Deadwood, South Dakota. Such characters as Deadwood Dick, Calamity Jane and Judge Nix were featured in the play. Everyone in the drama department participated. Also, open auditions were held for the entire school for parts in the play. The production of "Deadwood Dick" was an enjoyable experience for cast and crew members as well as for all who saw the show.

PRE-FLIGHT TRAINING

Chip Rives moves through a large hole in the Stuart line to help the Bruins rout the Raiders.

Entering another year of competition in the tough Northern District, our teams were faced with the task of upholding our reputation as one of the areas top athletic schools. Devoting several hours a day to practice, our athletes worked together to mold teams which would represent our school. In the end, athletic competition was just another step in life's pre-flight training.

Under the leadership of first year coach Joe Clark, the Varsity Football team opened practice in the early August heat with a feeling of change and excitement surrounding them. Coach Clark and his staff inherited a team filled with enthusiasm and drive, and through the long hot practices the team's spirit never diminished. When the coaches had become familiar with the players' individual talents, the team was broken into its separate units and the practices were regeared towards teaching players their particular responsibilities. Approaching the first game against Jefferson the team was confident in both its ability and determination.

Against non-league teams, the Bruins proved to be more than a match, picking up victories over Stuart 27-7 and Groveton 28-6. Tailback Chip Rives, who gained over a 1,000 yards rushing, and Jules Clifford, an all-district back, led the Bruin offense. All-region safety Jamie Shepherd and Scott Smith, a second team all-district linebacker, anchored the defense. Looking back on the season, Coach Clark stated, "I came here with the other coaches hoping to give the school a better feeling about football and I think we succeeded."

PURE CLASS

With a fantastic season, the J.V. Football Team won five of their eight games. Early in the season, using teamwork, determination, and sweat, they rocketed their way to a 20-0 win over Robinson. The Bruin's outstanding record peaked in mid-season with four shut-outs going to the J.V. team. Coach Kidd remarked, "The young men displayed nothing but class on and off the field. The school should be proud of the team's accomplishments." Even after two crushing defeats by Woodson and West Springfield at the end of the season, the J.V. Football Team finished the same way they had played all the way through...with class.

With little varsity experience, this year's Boy's Cross Country team had a long, hard road to travel if they were to repeat the success of previous teams. Running everyday after school and on the weekends, the team built up their endurance along with their confidence. Seniors Brian Moore and Chris Trizna provided the team with leadership and strength, and along with sophomore Chris Bryce, provided a talented and dedicated core for Coach Chris McDonald to build upon. Placing second in the district meet, the Bruins advanced to the regional meet where they placed seventh and completed a rewarding and highly successful season.

Dedication and stamina characterized this year's Girls' Cross Country Team. Running through the summer, the team kept in top shape preparing for the upcoming season. Andrea Volpe and Kristi Cassell led the team to victories in the George Mason and Fairfax County Invitionals. In the district meet, the Bruins were defeated by T.C. Williams and placed second, advancing them to the regional meet. The team placed a dissappointing fourth in the region with Andrea Volpe taking second and captain Martha Gandy along with Kristi Cassell finishing with the leaders. The girls had their revenge in the state meet where they placed third defeating all of their Northern Virginia opponents. Andrea Volpe, finishing first, became a state champion. Much hard work and determination was needed to accomplish these feats, but with the help of head coach Chris McDonald, the Girls' Cross Country Team proved themselves able.

Sharon Renkes and Lisa Clement formed an imposing doubles team that placed second in the district and then became the first girls' tennis pair that Lake Braddock has sent to the regionals. Other impressive performances were made by Holly Guynn and Huong Nguyen who each lost only two matches.

In the first round of the District Tournament, the Bruins defeated Chantilly, however, they lost to T.C. in the semi-finals. In the Regional Tournament the Bruins defeated Langley and Falls Church to advance to the championship game against Fairfax. In a hard fought game, the Bruins lost 3-1. Entering the season with few experienced players, the Boys' Varsity Basketball team faced an uphill struggle if they were to make a run for the district title. Tom Ondrof and Greg Cabrinha, the only returning players with much varsity experience, were expected to lead the Bruin offense, while a tough man to man and zone defense were counted on to keep the opponents' score down. Starting the season slowly, the team dropped their first few games against some highly ranked opponents. As the team neared the important part of their schedule they had compiled a respectable 5 and 5 overall record, while they stood at 2 and 1 in the district.

Mike Newell and Matt Dercole paced the offense, while defensively all of the players contributed. The season was filled with many successes, including a first place finish at the Parkview Invitational, and a second place finish at the Stafford Invitational. Maggie

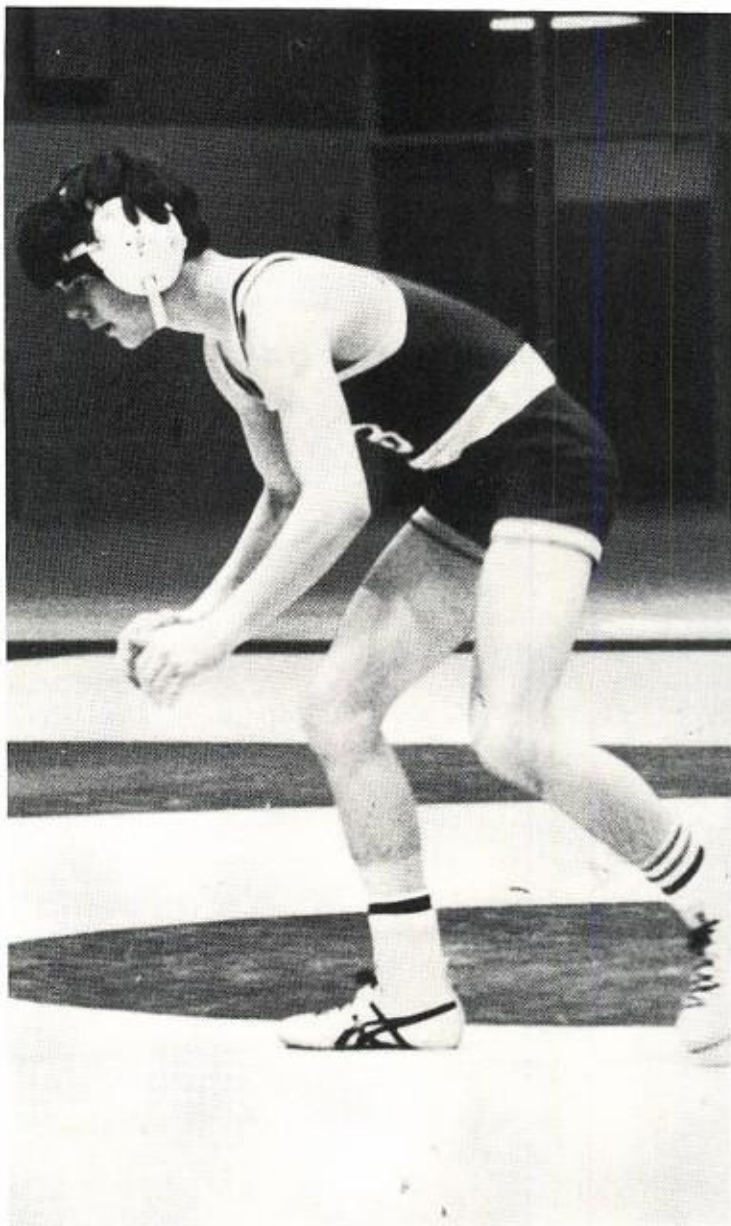

Eisenhower, Stacey Baker, and Janet Delaney were individual standouts on the team and along with Deborah Dooley, all advanced to the regional tournament. As the season ended, Coach Ripley looked back on the year and commented, "I'm proud of the way the girls performed, they did a fantastic job."

Sometimes the team was outmatched on the mat, but they were always ready to come back. The wrestlers placed fourth as a team in the district, with nine wrestlers continuing to regionals and a few others to the state. The wrestlers had many vigorous workouts, and Mike Santivicca felt that they couldn't have worked any harder. Some prominent wrestlers were Jeff Herb, Gary Aldrich, Mike Santivicca, Paul Heffren, and Tim Kan. Dedication to their sport characterized the Boys' Indoor Track Team. Grueling workouts were to be expected everyday in preparation for meets. These meets included the prestigious meet at the Naval Academy, in which Mike Turner placed first in the high jump with a jump of 6 feet 10 inches, the best on the East Coast. The team as a whole placed third in both the district and regional meets. Fine performances were turned in by Pat Hirl in the pole vault, Paul Southern in the hurdles, and Mike Turner who won in the regional, district and state meets. Because of the large number of coaches, athletes were able to receive specialized training in their respective events. The coaches all felt that their athletes performed well and gave their best efforts.

Though a relatively small group of girls when compared to previous seasons, this year's indoor track team swept through their season without losing a single meet. They were also victorious in the district and region, while placing fourth in the state. These victories were not easily won though; many long hours of practice contributed to their success. Besides the usual after school practice, athletes could be seen practicing before school, late at night, and over vacations. Carla Criste broke the school indoor track record for high jump, and along with Angie Winegeart excelled in hurdles and long jump. Andrea Volpe ran very well in distance and claimed two state championship titles. Though often going in different directions while practicing, under the guidance of coaches Trimm, Seemuller, McDonald, Abbott, and Worthington, the girls always rallied for the meets and performed well both individually and as a team.

With good form, Tricia Galbraith clears five feet in the Regional meet.

Easily winning her heat of the semi-finals, Carla Criste proceeds to the finals.

With a tremendous lead, Andrea Volpe begins her last lap.

BOISTEROUS BRAVINS

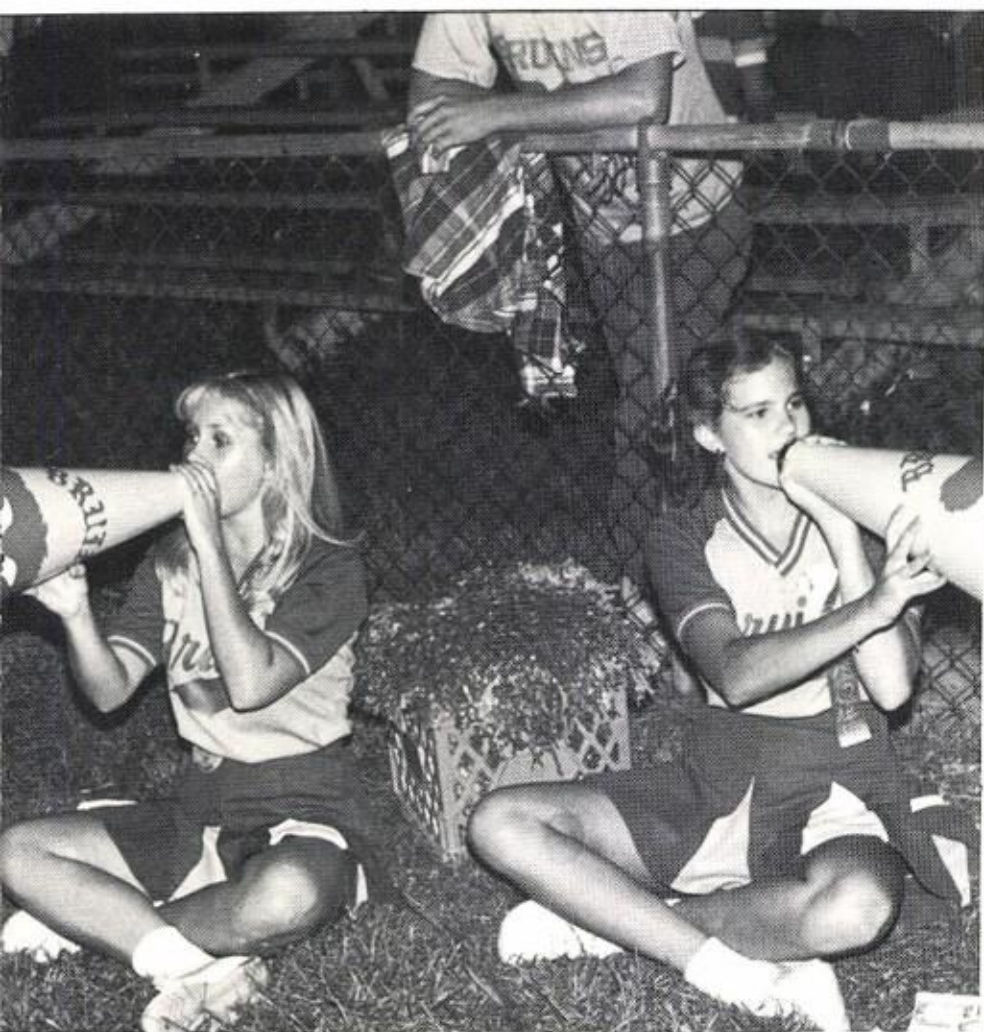

Doing the splits in mid-air, Karen Zaterka celebrates a Bruin score.

Showing unity, Becky Rice and Gila Levine display their feelings about being Bruins.

As the football team takes the field against Jefferson, Leilani Tamura tries to awaken the crowd.

Kevin Rice and Karen Anderson use their megaphones to cheer on the team against Edison.

Sparkling enthusiasm and leading cheers, the Varsity Cheerleaders brought excitement and spirit to our school's sporting events. Instructed by Kay Mikula, the squad practiced during the summer and after school in order to perfect their routines. With a large number of boy cheerleaders, the squad was able to perform many difficult cheers and stunts not done before. Whether at a football, basketball, or wrestling events, the cheerleaders were a welcome and exciting sight.

Kevin McCoy tries to raise Bruin spirits in a hard fought loss to Edison.

Smiling over the Bruins' score, Karen Zaterka enjoys the opening game victory over Jefferson.

Cheerleader-a person who leads spectators in traditional or formal cheering. Whether home or away, the spectators at every JV and Freshman ball game were led in cheer by the JV and Freshman cheerleaders. While leading the crowd in cheers, the girls also helped boost the morale of the team members. Although it sounded easy, a lot of work went into being a cheerleader. The cheerleaders met after school to practice and learn new routines. When it came time for the games, the cheerleaders were ready to cheer and throughout the season added spirit and excitement to the games.

During the Woodson game, Chris McIntyre cheers the JV players on.

As the second half of the game begins

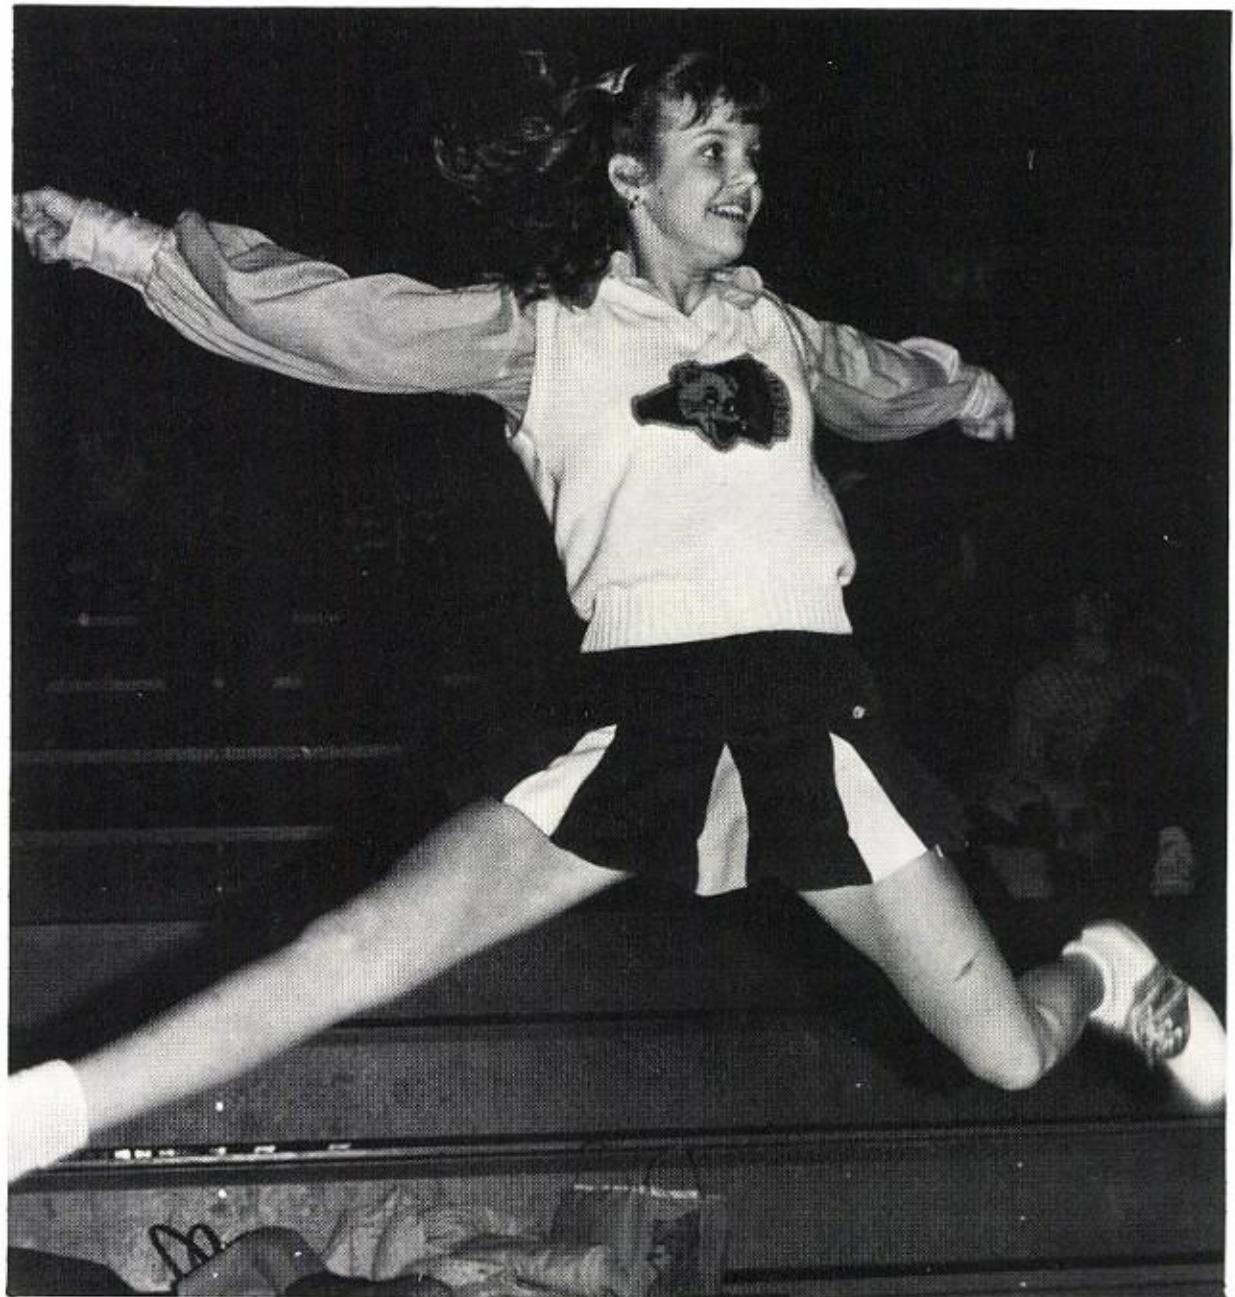

FOR THE PURPLE & GOLD"

Smith leads the crowd in cheers.

Demonstrating her spirit and enthusiasm at the Freshman game is Lynn Rascoll.

It was a year of changes in school and in the world around us. A new pledge to tighten administrative control over student discipline led to increased punishments for tardiness, cutting, and absenteeism. To help curb mounting disciplinary problems in Subschoools 1 and 2, intermediate lunch shifts were separated from those of the high school and were also put under strict watch. In addition, open classrooms, especially for the intermediates, became a rarity as the vast open areas of six years ago gained walls and doors. Many of these changes were due to administrative replacements. New principals arrived in Subschoools 2, 4, and 6 and Harry Holsinger replaced Eugene Puffenberger as Associate Principal. Fairfax County also provided us with more changes. A new grading scale, designed to increase the incentive to make good grades by adding plusses, was instigated, confusing both teachers and students alike. Fairfax County also made the news with their dramatic sting operation which busted an entire local drug ring. On the national level, the first year of the Reagan administration brought with it many changes. His conservative "Reaganomic" policies brought with them both dramatic legislative victories and public fear for the future possibility of economic crisis. The tragic Air Florida and Metro crashes threw the Washington area into shock as we questioned the safety of our local mass transportation system. While the recession and our rising crime and unemployment rates monopolized our domestic worries, turmoil in Poland, Central America, and the Middle East continued to plague our foreign policy. Together, these changes combined to make this a challenging and eventful year with the promise of much more to come in the future.

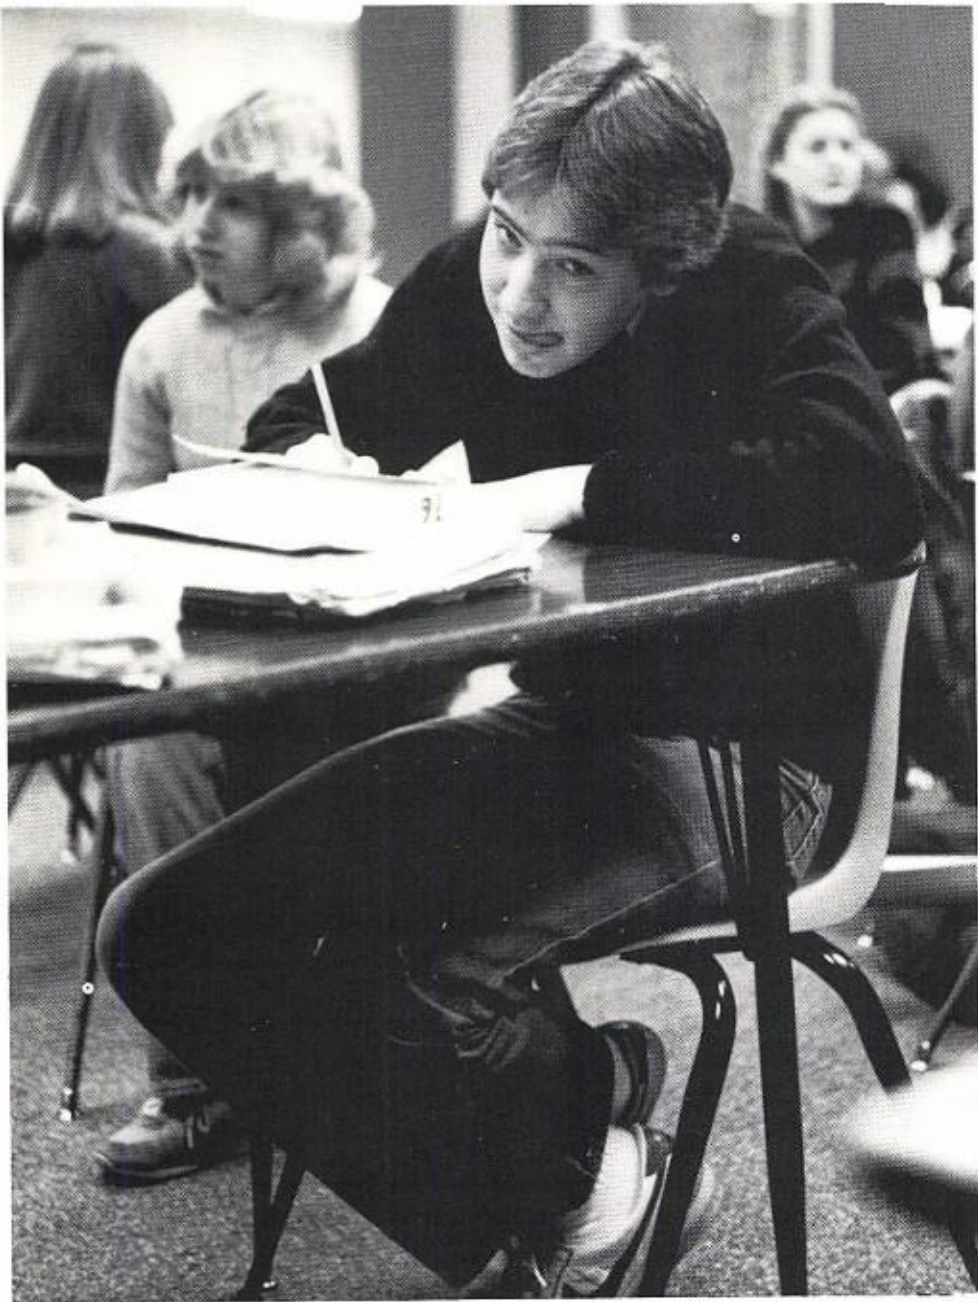

Editorial editor Tim Proffitt carefully straightens his page for the next issue of The Bear Facts.

Computer science student Gail Haggard attempts to correct her program with the help of Karen McCormick.

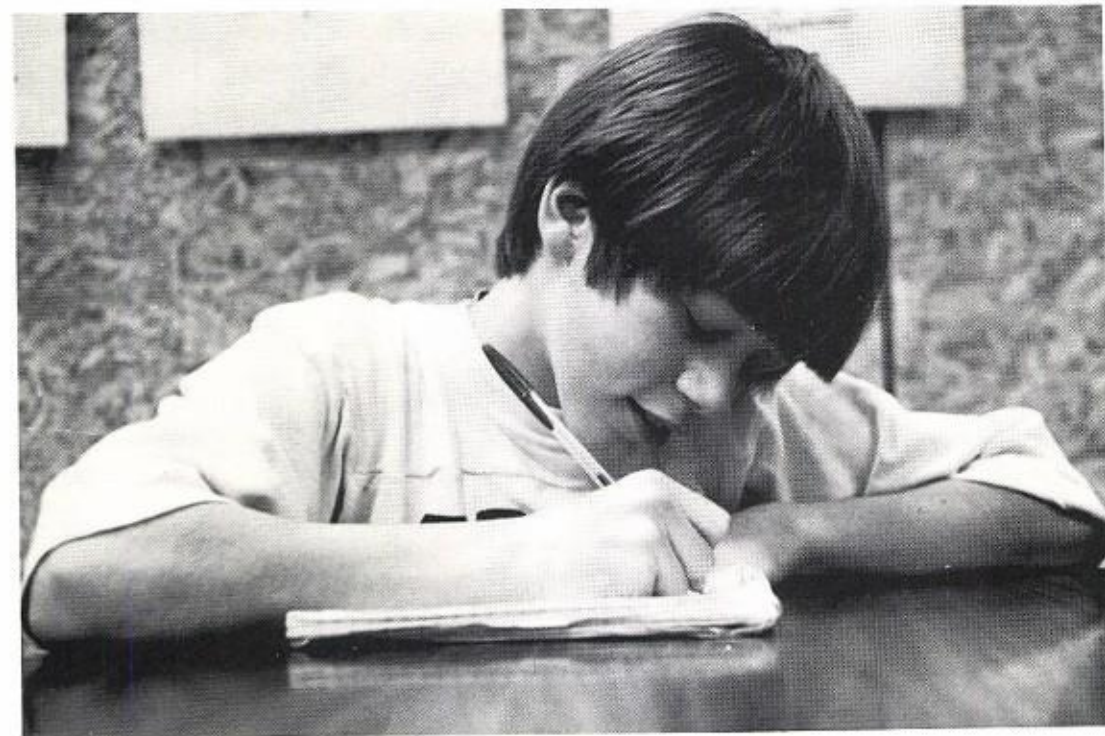

A YEAR OF CHANGES

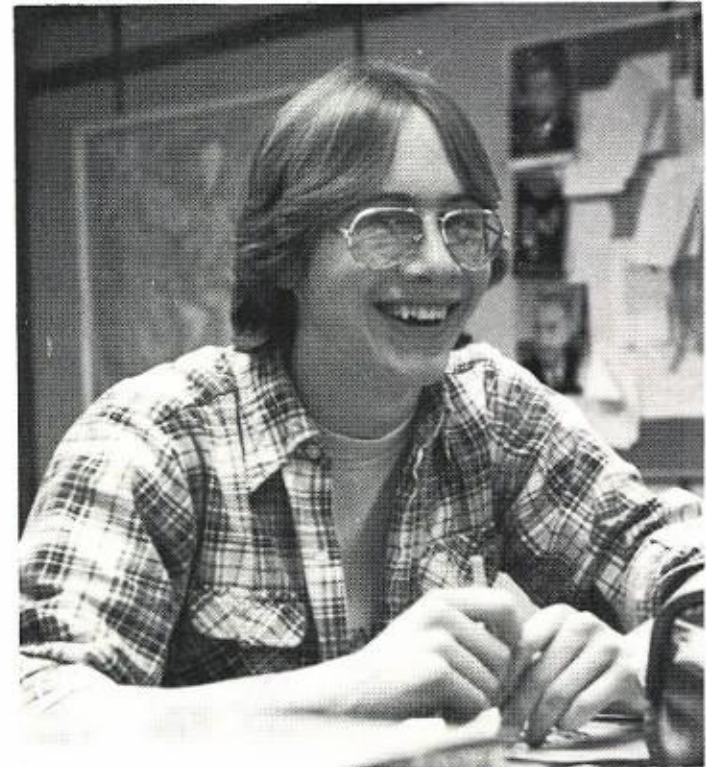

During Mrs. Powell's first period English class, Stewart Patterson concentrates on his test on Mark Twain.

Getting a bird's eye view of the main hall is Kris Pfanschmidt.

Joey Clement finds a quiet place to work in the Subschool 1 English area.

At an after school literary magazine meeting, John Campbell takes an editing break.

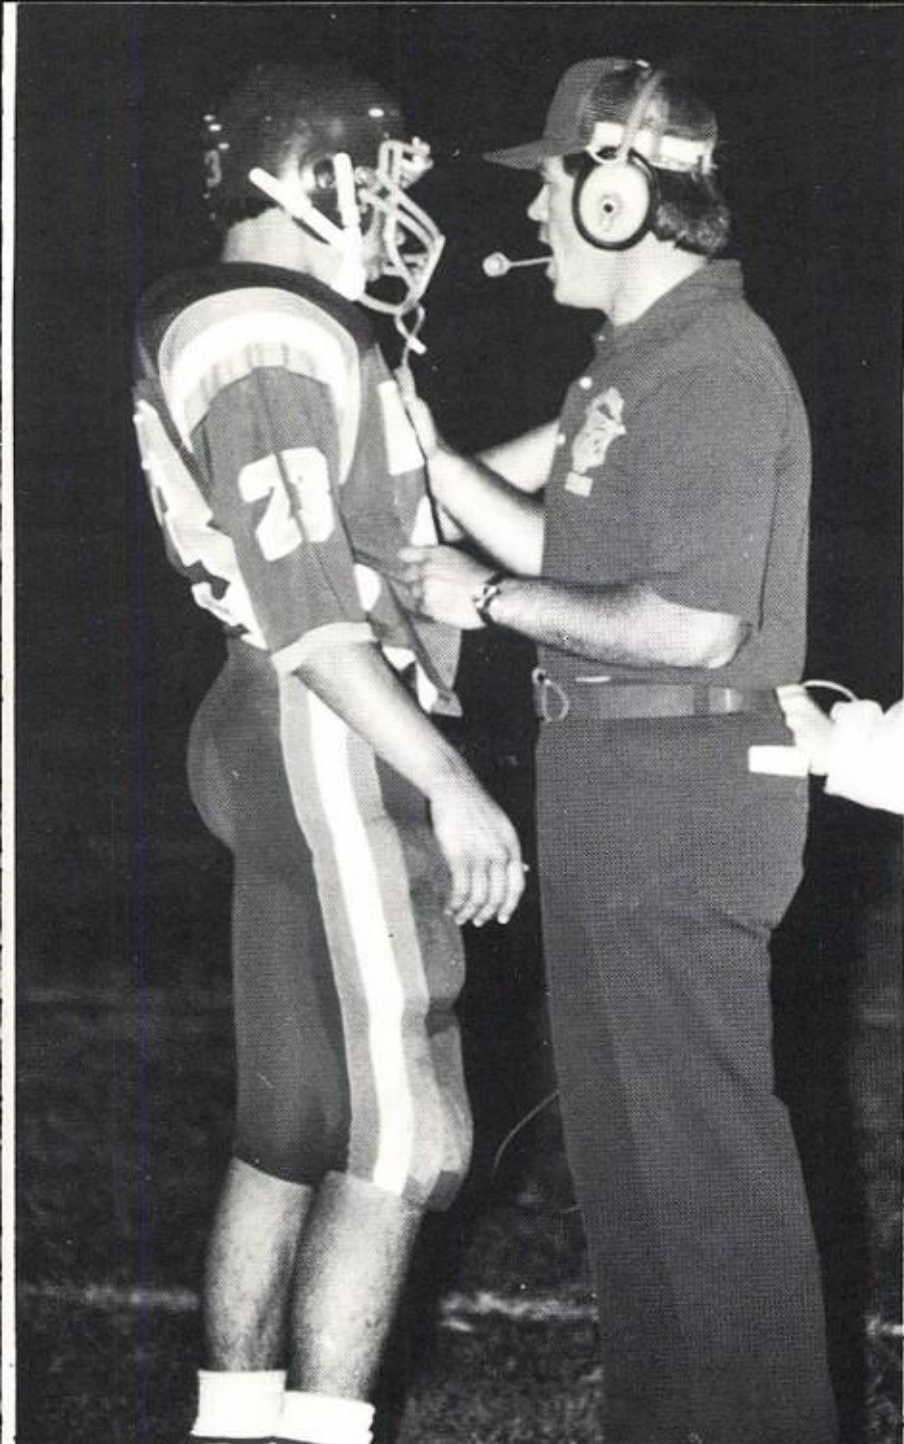

Chains of lasting friendships are common for a school the size of Lake Braddock. (Mary Waleka, Sandy Austin, Jim Vaile, Ann Balady, Linda Ramsey)

As we blasted off into the new school year, we found ourselves in a great orbit of progressively closed classrooms. Even though we lost our open space to the construction of walls, we remained ahead of the race by gaining considerable status with SCREAM'S addition of intensified classes to the regimen of the flight crew engaged in pre-flight training. Despite the growing number of closed classrooms, we were considered an advanced institution with the increase of computer use for everyday activities such as report cards, which were delivered to students promptly after the quarter. Coinciding with the administrative use of these technical machines, courses in computer science became more popular, and a class in computer applications was included in the course selections.

NEW FRONTIERS

Early in the morning, Scott Mewhinney finishes his government project before the halls become crowded with students.

Despite varying opinions, Cheryl Williams and Barbara Weger rate guys during the lunch period.

As we took time out from the advanced school system, we turned to the audio visual side of computers in the community. It was a common sight to see computer games adorn entrances of restaurants, stores and arcades, but Space Invaders slowly declined in popularity as Pac Man fever spread throughout the student body. A more unusual but increasing sight, was home computers. Computer corporations, such as Apple, made computers available for personal use. While video games continued on the upswing, digital watches followed suit. By the end of the school year classrooms flooded with the sound of beeps of watch alarms as the end of classes neared.

THE FINAL QUEST

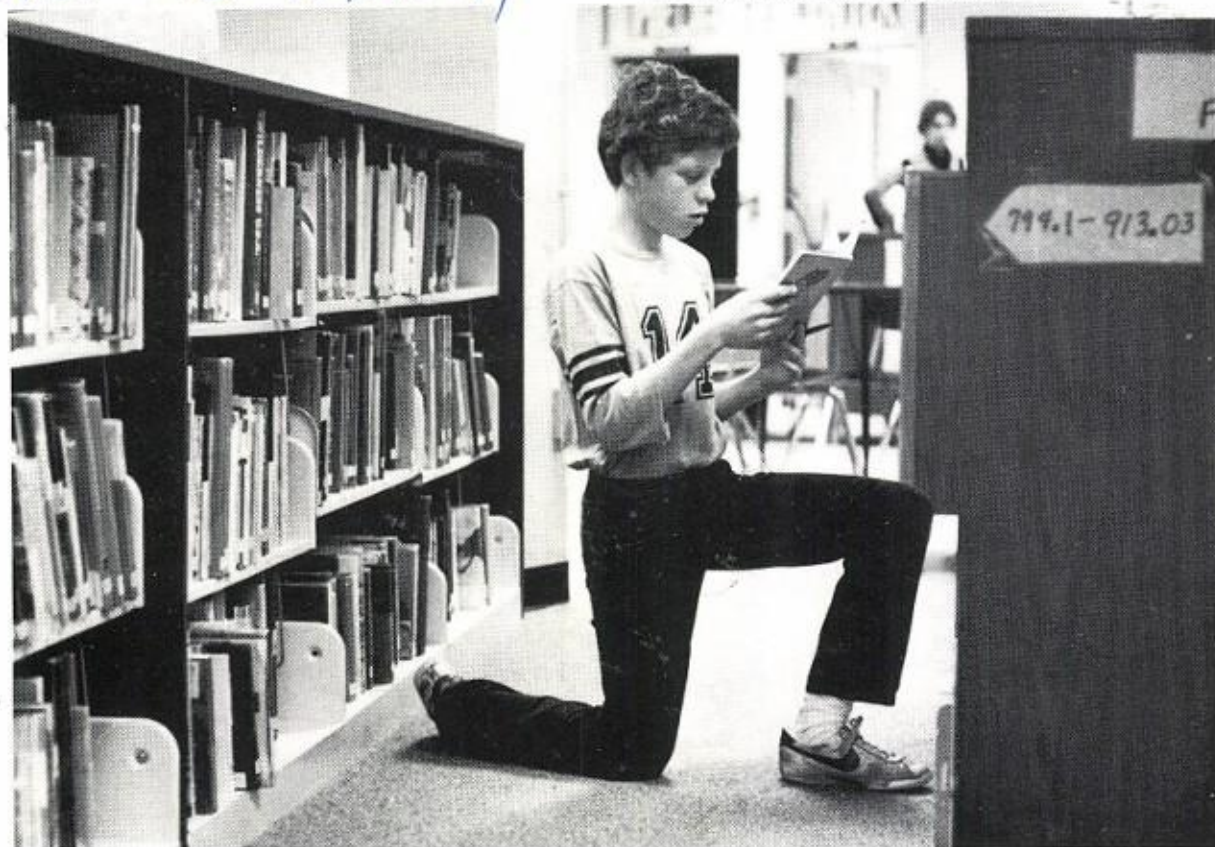

LORI & KATHY

Not only was Lake Braddock advanced technically, the school also benefitted from its size. With the support of the ground crew, several vocational classes were available to students in mechanics, general maintenance and cosmetology. Because Lake Braddock had the facilities for such a large selection of classes, students from other schools were able to enroll in these classes. We also maintained the ESL classes in English and government for students from foreign countries with the help of mission control. One of our most prominent assets, however, was the music department consisting of eleven instrumental, six vocal and three general music programs. Their excellence was illustrated by placing in every competition in which they participated. With the end of the school year near, we started the countdown of the departure of the largest class ever to graduate from Lake Braddock, and soon it was the final day when we splashed down and knew that our mission was accomplished.

The 1982 Lair had a four-color process cover with a computer generated color design printed on white durolith Arco-cloth. The book was printed on Taylor 80# enamel with Taylor 100# enamel used for the color pages. All paper used was made by the West Virginia Paper Company. Color pictures were separated by computerized laser scanner and printed on Miller four-color process. Typography and pagination of Helios body type in 6, 8, 10, and 12 point type was done by staff members on the Compugraphic MDT 350 computer. All headlines and graphics were set by the staff. Contributing photographers not on the regular staff were Dean Surrette, Jeff Peterson, Mike Kidd, Mark Maxwell, Tom Facca, Kris Koscielniak, Sara Trezona, Jeff Ford, and Lori Jacka. Contributing

Well, I'm so glad that I got to know you really, all last

you, but I never got a chance me, how about you? Our English and typing classes were fun, but hopelessly next year, you will be in my classes too. Sorry, thanks for all I help you've given me in typing, and in English. You helped me decide what to do in English, and I'm really (grateful to you) ^(whatever means) ^(spelling)

it's really great, cause you so pretty and nice. Well this summer John and I will come over sometime, hopefully when Jeff's not over doing something naughty,

Lori,

It seems like this terrible year would never, ever come to a end and I'm probably the happiest to see it over, but you really helped me through it Lori, I really feel that without you and your constant help with me, I don't think I would of made it through, you couldn't believe just how glad I am that you came into my life just one year ago, and know it seems like I've known you all my life. Even though we (as it seems) always fight, all of our good times together outnumber them all !!! But through all of our fights, break-ups etc... you made me realize that in the whole wide world of girls, there really is a "perfect" girl out there and I've met one in you. I love you so, so much and honestly believe that you've changed my life for the better, you made me aware of my faults, of how to really care for someone that I'm deeply and very truly in love with; and made me aware of mine and other peoples feelings, I just wish we could of been getting along this great before we broke up again, but like I told you, it helped us, you proved to me that I was in love with the perfect girl plus I also found out I couldn't live without you in my life. It seems to me that I owe you so much for coming into my life, and I'll make it up to you for as long as we're going out, I promise !! I'm really glad that me & you got back together, your one person I can't go through without, I was beginning to doubt whether or not you wanted to go out with me, I hope we'll work out for the best because you deserve the very best & treatment possible, hopefully I can give you what you want/need.

Well Lori, I really don't know what else to say, that I all ready haven't told you so please remember just how special of a girl you are to me, not just as a understanding girlfriend, but as a close bestfriend too!! I'll do everything possible to make us work, I love you way too much to blow this, I'm so, so lucky to have a beautiful, careing, smart, funny and most of all, a "lady" with all the class in the world, I'll never forget you Lori, your in my heart forever, as the only girl that really and truly showed love to me and who taught me how to love back. I'll always, always, always, always love you for that.

I love you forever,

Jeff Ridley
